PREFATORY NOTE

THE seventy six pre-Reformation documents, the text of which is given in this volume, are contained in official Registers of Bishops of Lincoln, preserved in the Diocesan Registry at Lincoln.

The volume was originally intended to include only sixty three documents, which had been transcribed a long time ago, for the Early English Text Society, under the direction of Dr. F. J. Furnivall. The text of these documents has benefited to an inestimable extent by the devotion and archivist skill of Canon Charles Wilmer Foster, M.A., St. John's College, Oxford; Vicar of Timberland; Canon of Lincoln.

Canon Foster also made known to me the existence of other like documents in the Lincoln Episcopal Registers, which Dr. Furnivall had overlooked; and placed at the disposal of the Society accurate copies of thirteen of the more distinctive of these. Readers of these Additional Documents will readily appreciate how much this volume has gained from this act of scholarly generosity.

I have also to acknowledge, with deep thankfulness, valued corrections and information given me throughout the volume by Canon Foster, and by my old helpers, the Rev. H. E. Salter, M.A., New College, Oxford, and the Rev. F. W. Weaver, M.A., Magdalen College, Oxford, Vicar of Milton Clevedon, Somersetshire. Other scholars, also, have been most generous in helping me in matters of special difficulty. Through their kindness, the notes possess a far higher value than I could have provided them with.

I hope that the Grammar Notes and Indexes will make readily accessible the many points of interest, linguistic and historical, of these seventy-six documents.

ANDREW CLARK.

SIXTY-THREE LINCOLN DIOCESE DOCUMENTS,

1450-1544

Forewords.

THE documents contained in this volume are only a further instalment of the vast and omnigenous mass of material for English studies which we owe to the pioneer instinct and unflagging energy of Dr. F. J. Furnivall. Divining that the Bishops' Registers at Lincoln must contain matters of more immediate interest for English speech and English social history than the formal Latin records of institutions to benefices and of disputed elections to Fellowships or Headships in Oxford Colleges, which were known to bulk largely in them, Dr. Furnivall went to Lincoln, personally inspected the Registers, made a list of the more characteristic of their English or quasi-English documents, and set a copyist to work to transcribe them. Thereafter, Dr. Furnivall examined the transcripts, made notes in them about their subject-matter, and arranged them in order of time. They are now issued, though long after the date of their being brought together, very much in the form into which he had finally put them.

One document, contained in this series as originally put together, does not appear in this volume. This is that most vivid account of Godstow nunnery in 1432 in bishop William Grey's Register, which has been already printed (1913) by E.E.T.S. in an appropriate place (English Register of Godstow, pp. lxxxi-xciv.)

I greatly regret that my own few visits to Lincoln have been so short and so fully occupied that I have never been able to go to the Registry and see the Registers for myself. But, on general grounds, I felt that, in the present instance, the copyist's work was excellent. His transcript of every document was (plainly) not only careful, but intelligent. The text has, however, attained to an altogether exceptional standard of exactness, through having been collated with the MS. sources, in a multitude of doubtful places, by Canon C. W. Foster, F.S.A., Secretary and Editor of the Lincoln Record Society.

The sixty-three documents are spread, intermittently, over the years 1450 to 1544, and are of varied character.

It must be remembered (a) that the entries in these Registers are all, in one way or other, records of proceedings in an Ecclesiastical Court, and (b) that Latin was the official language of such courts. Accordingly, all the more formal proceedings which concern the several matters touched on in this volume appear in a Latin narrative, of an official character. For the benefit of such students of English as may happen to be inexpert with Latin, a sufficient English summary has been given of all these passages, at the editor's risk of being thought pedantic.

Bishops of Lincoln. The Bishops, whose Registers have been laid under contribution in this volume, are—

Marmaduke Lumley, translated from Carlisle, 28 January 1449 $\frac{9}{10}$; died 1450.

His Register seems to have continued in use after his decease, since the two wills here taken from it both fall within the episcopate of his successor.

John Chedworth (archdeacon of Wilts.), appointed 11 February 1459 $\frac{1}{2}$; died 23 November 1471.

John Longland (Principal of Magdalen Hall, Oxford), appointed 20 March 1529 $\frac{9}{10}$; died 7 May 1547.

The first document given here from his Register is the enrolment of an agreement which belongs to the episcopate of one of his predecessors (William Smyth, bishop 1495 to 1513 $\frac{3}{4}$).

Wills. The greater part of this volume is occupied with transcripts of wills and records of their probate. The Bishop's Ecclesiastical Court claimed jurisdiction over all Executors and Administrators; admitted them (under bond for faithful discharge of their duties) to execution of their trust; and audited their accounts. The formal record of probate, as has been explained above, is invariably in Latin. This probate record, in several instances, has been abbreviated by the transcriber. In some instances the nominal 'will' is in Latin, but, in these cases, its intentions are usually stated more fully in a codicil which is in English. Generally, however, inasmuch as the will was a document to be carried into effect by people who spoke English, the whole text of it is in English.

The wills are of very varied scope, some short and some long, including, at one end, the great territorial magnate, whose manors had been scattered over several counties, and who founded for his own sepulture a great chantry-chapel; and, at the other end, the mere husbandman, who sought undistinguished burial in the churchyard of his parish and had at his disposal only his household-stuff, his farm-implements, and his live-stock.

The larger wills are rich in details about several points of antiquarian interest: e.g. the minute directions as to entail by which testators sought to ensure the continuance of estates in their own families; the manifold bequests to servants of different grades, which exemplify the great households kept up by wealthy land-owners; the lavish hospitality extended to all and sundry who attended funeral services; and the variety of intercessory services¹ asked for by testators.

The wills recorded in this volume are thirty-seven in number. They are arranged in order of date of first making, not of date of any later codicil attached to them, or of their probate.

Cathedral and parish church. In almost every will, the testator acknowledges his allegiance to the church of his diocese by a small bequest to the repair-fund (ad fabricam, 'to the wark') of Lincoln Minster. In the same way, duty to the parish church is recognized by bequests to the high altar, to the repair-fund, or to particular images or lights in the church.

The bequest to the high altar is often stated to be in amends of 'forgotten tithe', i.e. (in most cases) of unpaid Easter dues.¹ Oxford examples are: 1527 (at St. Michael's Church): received by bequest of the servant of Mr. Cole of Exeter College, to the high altar, for forgotten tithe, 3s. 4d. 1529 (at All Saints): received by bequest of Mr. John Semon, for offerings and tithes forgotten, 6s. 8d.

Mortuaries. In connexion with these wills, one subject is mentioned so repeatedly, and in such different connexions, as to require separate notice. Every now and again, a testator is found giving his executors directions as to payment of a mortuary (Oseney English Register, E.E.T.S., xix) for him. Sometimes, a testator assigns a particular animal or piece of apparel for this purpose. Sometimes, a testator leaves it to be determined 'according to custom'. At the end of the period, testators submit to the king's statute. This statute was passed by Parliament in 1529 (21 Henr. VIII., cap. vi: Statutes at Large, edit. 1770, vol. ii, pp. 140-1) to determine in what parishes mortuaries ought to be paid, for what persons, and how much; and enacted that, after 1st April 1530, no mortuary (otherwise called *corse*² present) should be asked otherwise than as this Act allowed.

The provisions of the Act, which concern the wills here printed, are these:

(A) as regards parishes in which mortuaries might be asked:

(i) no mortuary might be asked except in parishes where it had been usual for mortuaries to be asked and paid.

² i. e. corpse.

This provision shows that the exaction of this fee was not universally prevalent, but that some parishes were free from it.

(ii) only one mortuary might be asked in respect of any deceased person, and that only in the place of deceased's usual abode.

This provision deals with such cases as (a) the deceased having separate estates in the same parish; (b) the deceased having estates in more than one parish; (c) the deceased dying, on a journey or on a visit, in some parish other than the parish of his usual abode. Sir Thomas Cumberworth's (no. II) bequest (1459) of three mortuaries, one at each of his three principal estates, belongs to the earlier, and more burdensome, form of the custom.

(B) as regards persons in respect of whom mortuaries might be asked :

A mortuary might be asked only where the deceased (a) was a householder; and (b) had, at the time of death, movable goods, when all debts had been paid, to the value of over ten marks (£6 13s. 4d.).

This excluded from charges for mortuary—

- (i) all married women;
- (ii) all children;
- (iii) all adults who were only inmates, not heads of households;
- (iv) all persons of less estate than is above said.

(C) as regards legal amount of claim for mortuaries :

Where the estate, all debts paid, was

- | | | |
|---|-----|----------|
| (i) above £6 13s. 4d. but under £30, the mortuary | | |
| might be | | 3s. 4d.; |
| (ii) above £30 but under £40 | „ „ | 6s. 8d.; |
| (iii) above £40 | „ „ | 10s. 0d. |

But, in all parishes in which old custom had fixed the mortuary at a lower rate than the above table, the old rate was to continue.

All persons aggrieved by excessive claim for mortuary might recover at law the sum of forty shillings from any parson, vicar, curate, parish-priest, or other spiritual person, or their fermours, bailiffs, or lessees, who demanded more than the Act allowed.

But, by a special section in the Act, clergy were allowed 'to take and receive any manner of sums of money, or other thing' which deceased persons, by their will, might bequeath to them personally or to the high altar of their church.

It is, perhaps, worth while to set down—as showing how severely this Act limited the old claim for mortuaries, a few actual mortuaries charged in All Saints and St. Michael's Northgate parishes, Oxford. The records are found, in the Bursar's Account for the year named in each case, in the archives of Lincoln College, Oxford; and, up till now, have remained unpublished.

Mortuaries were charged for wayfarers in the parish in which they died:

1509 (at All Saints) 22*d.* for the mortuary of Mr. Jefford's servant who died in Oxford. (Mr. Jefford was tenant of a Lincoln College manor at Bushbury in Staffordshire, and this servant had come to Oxford to pay his master's rent.)

1510 (at All Saints) 2*s.* 4*d.*, for the mortuary of a stranger woman who died in the parish; (at St. Michael's) 9*s.*, for the mortuary of a stranger.

Mortuaries were charged for married women:

1487 (at All Saints), received for the mortuary of Ashley's¹ wife (viz. a gown which Ashley bought back), 10*s.* 4*d.*

1509 (at St. Michael's), 8*s.*, for the mortuary of an innkeeper's wife.

Mortuaries were charged for young people:

1507 (at St. Michael's) 6*d.*, for a lad's gown taken as a mortuary.

Mortuaries were charged for inmates of houses, who were not householders; and for servants:

1509 (at All Saints) 6*s.*, for the mortuary of Beyston's sister.

1517 (at All Saints) 5*s.*, for the mortuary of William Frere's brother.

1514 (at All Saints) 3*s.*, for the mortuary of John Kyng's maid-servant.

1527 (at All Saints) 10*d.* for the mortuary of Robert Mundy's man-servant.

Mortuaries were charged for quite poor people:

1509 (at St. Michael's) 12*d.*, for the mortuary of Henry Seth's apprentice.

1510 (at All Saints) 20*d.*, for the mortuary of a poor woman; (at St. Michael's) 16*d.*, for the mortuary of Thomas Smyth, a poor scholar.

1517 (at All Saints) 8*d.*, for the mortuary of a poor fellow at the barber's.

1527 (at All Saints) 6*d.*, for the mortuary of Maurice the labourer.

Mortuaries had formerly considerably exceeded the 10*s.* allowed in the Act:

1487 (at All Saints) for Mr. Wither's gown [a mortuary], 20s.

1509 (at All Saints) 20s. for the mortuary of John Lynch, apothecary, and for the composition for wax [i. e. for the use at the funeral of the wax-tapers belonging to the church: but this charge when mentioned separately is generally put at 12d.].

1509 (at All Saints), 16s. 8d. for the mortuary of Thomas Lyttstar.

1509 (at St. Michael's) 23s. 4d., for Helen Rogers' mortuary.

Funeral and Commemorative Services. It may prove convenient to put here an outline of the services asked for by testators in these wills, with a summary of some hitherto unpublished documents which supply exact details concerning them.

The funeral services were three in number; (i) the Vespers of the Office of the Dead; (ii) the Matins of the Office of the Dead; (iii) the Mass for the Dead. All these were special services, differing in details from the ordinary Vespers, Matins, and Mass.

(i) The Vespers-service took place on the evening before the funeral-day. It was known as Placebo, because it began with the Antiphon Placebo Domino in regione vivorum (Psalm cxv. 9, in the Vulgate¹).

(ii) The Matins-service took place nominally soon after midnight, but in practice considerably later.² It was known as Dirige (in a great variety of spellings), because it began with the antiphon Dirige, Domine, Deus meus, in conspectu tuo viam meam (founded on Psalm v. 9, in the Vulgate version³).

It would appear that a large attendance of priests and clerks was desired to give impressiveness to the Placebo and Dirige services, and that this end was secured by assigning the singing of particular Psalms and antiphons, and the reading of particular collects and lessons, to different persons. This seems the intention of Henry Philips (no. XVII) in his will, 1459. In Dr. Furnivall's Political, Religious, and Love Poems (E.E.T.S.; 1866 and re-edited 1903), there is, pp. 6-11, a satirical Placebo and Dirige for the hated Duke of Suffolk, beheaded 1450. In this, in verses

¹ Psalm 116. 9, in the English Prayer Book ('I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living').

² Lord Lovel (no. VIII) directed Matins of the day in his chapel to begin on Sunday at 6 a.m., and the Mass of the day to be said immediately after Matins.

³ Psalm 5. 8, in English Prayer Book ('Lead me, O Lord . . . make thy way plain before my face').

5 to 7, the Placebo service is divided into twelve successive sections, each of which is assigned to a different singer or reader. In the same way, in verses 9–28, the much longer Dirige service is divided into forty-two sections, each rendered by a different person, after which come two hymns (the Dies irae being one of them).

It is, of course, more than likely that this satire exaggerates what was usual, in order to bring in the names of as many adherents of the hated Suffolk as was possible, but, unless these familiar services had been commonly portioned out in this way among different persons, such partition would not have been made, even in parody.

Verse 12 in the satire parodies the mention-by-name (nota, pp. 11, 12) of the persons specially prayed for in the service.

In the authorized forms of both the Vespers (Placebo) and the Matins (Dirige), provision was made, in certain of the Collects, for mention by name of the deceased and of his friends. This mention in Latin was called cum nota. The Vespers and Matins are sometimes vaguely spoken of conjointly under the name Exequies.

(iii) The Mass for the Dead was known as the Mass of Requiem, from its Introit Requiem aeternam dona eis, Domine; et lux perpetua luceat eis (= Rest eternal give them, O Lord; and let light unceasing lighten them).

In this Mass, in certain of the Collects used in it which had previously been used in the Exequies, as well as in the special Mass-Collects known as the Secretum and the Post-Communio, mention by name of the deceased person and of his friends was made.

To ensure sufficient attendance of worshippers at their Dirige and at their Requiem Mass, testators are often found making special bequests of meat, of drink, and of money, to those present at the two services.

On the thirtieth day after the decease or burial, special care was taken to provide for a repetition of the three services. This day, and its services, were known as the trigintale, the trentale, the 'trentall' (no. XXXII; no. XLII), the 'thirty-day', the 'month's mind' (no. LVIII).

But occasionally (as infra 52/20) testators directed that these services should have been said also on the seventh day (called 'the sevensnight') after the decease or burial. They had, no doubt, in view, the natural sequence—the day, the day week, the day month, to be followed by the day year.

The will (no. XXXII) of Ralph Wotton, 1533, supplies an unusual repetition of the month's-mind, viz., that it should be observed monthly for a whole year.

Further, testators of sufficient means were careful to have these services repeated on the day-year of the decease. This was called the anniversarius, the obitus, the 'anniversary' (no. XXXVI); the 'year's-mind', or 'year-day' (no. XVIII), 'or twelve-months mind' (no. XXII).

This yearly commemoration was often continued¹ for a term of years, in terms of a will; or, by permanent endowment, for ever. To secure due attendance at the anniversary, or obit,² as it was variously called, testators are found making careful provisos as to the sum-total required on each occasion, and as to the mode of its distribution among those present.

Still wealthier people provided for daily intercessory services, during a term of years; or, by permanent endowment, for ever. Lord Lovel's will (no. VIII) is a notable instance of the foundation of such a cantaria, chantry (Godstow English Register, E.E.T.S., 1913, p. xxx).

It so happens that in the case of John Denham, whose will, in an abbreviated form, is found in these documents (no. XXII), it is possible to set out distinctly the whole procedure, from his *compositio*³ with Lincoln College, Oxford (Latin text in William Vesey's 1710 MS. Exemplificatio cartarum nostrarum in the College Archives, lf. 67).

Agreement with John Denham, rector of Barnake.

'To all to whom this indenture may come John Cottysford, D.D., Warden or Rector of the College of the Blessed Mary and All Saints in Oxford, commonly called Lyncolne College, and the Fellows or Scholars of the same, send greeting.

'Having compassion on the insufficiently endowed state of our ³ Formal written agreement.

College, John Denham, a former Fellow, now rector of Barnake in Northamptonshire, has bestowed on the College the sum of £20.

‘In gratitude for this benefaction the Rector and Fellows undertake, for themselves and their successors—

‘to observe the death-day of Mr. John Denham (so soon as the news of it reaches the college), with Placebo and Dirige on the first day¹, *cum nota*²; and with a Mass of Requiem on the next day, making use of the prayer of the Office of the Dead, viz., *Deus*³, cui proprium est miserere et parcere, propitiare animae famuli tui Iohannis sacerdotis, both in the Mass and in the Exequies; and, in the mass, using a fitting Secretum and a fitting Post-Communio.

‘The College is to pay to those present at this Mass and the Exequies, viz. to the Rector 12*d.* and to each Fellow, 6*d.*

‘Every year after Denham’s decease, he is to be commemorated at the anniversary service⁴ which the executors of Thomas Bekyn-ton, bishop of Bath and Wells, had provided for that prelate in Lincoln College, Oxford, by mention, as John, a priest, our benefactor, in the Collect for Benefactors in the Placebo and Dirige services [*Deus*⁵ cuius misericordiae non est numerus, suscipe propitius preces humilitatis nostrae pro anima famuli tui Iohannis sacerdotis, benefactoris nostri]; and by like mention of him by name and benefaction (in the Mass of Requiem) in Collect, Secretum, and Post-Communio.

‘Given in Lincoln College, 30 June, 19 Henry VIII (1527).’

Agreement with Edmund Audley, bishop of Salisbury.

In the same MS. (Vesey’s Exemplificatio, supra, p. 10), lf. 62, there are the arrangements made, 8 June, 10 Henry VIII (1518), by Edmund Audley, bishop of Salisbury (died 23 August 1524), for his obit⁶ to be kept yearly in Lincoln College, Oxford, which are even more precise in their specifying of the commemoration by name, and therefore may be set down briefly here as illustrating

³ ‘O God, whose property is ever to have mercy and forgive, have mercy on the soul of thy servant, John, a priest.’

⁴ Kept on January 16: Clark’s

Lincoln College (1898), p. 24.

⁶ Kept yearly on 23 August so long as obits were legal.

considerable parts of sir Thomas Cumberworth's will (no. II) and of Lord Lovel's will (no. VIII).

Yearly, bishop Audley's obit is to be observed in Lincoln College chapel, with Exequies on the night preceding and Mass of Requiem next day.

The Collect¹ is to be used: Deus qui inter apostolicos sacerdotes famulum tuum Edmundum pontificem, benefactorem nostrum, pontificali fecisti dignitate vigere.

In the Secretum these words are to be used: Offerimus² tibi, Domine, oblationem nostrae servitutis pro anima famuli tui, Edmundi, pontificis, benefactoris nostri.

In the Post-Communion these words are to be used: Proficiat,³ queso, Domine, animae famuli tui Edmundi, pontificis, benefactoris nostri; after which the celebrant is to go on to say—‘and also to the souls of James Tuchet late lord Audley,⁴ and his wife Eleanor (the bishop's parents), and to the souls of all the bishop's friends and benefactors’.

Further intercession is to be made for the bishop's parents and benefactors, by the use of—

(a) the Orison or Collect: Concede, queso, Domine Deus noster, ut anima famuli tui Iacobi, anima famule tue Alianore, et anime famulorum famularumque tuarum quorum quarumque memoriam et commemorationem speciali devotione agimus: Grant, I pray thee, O Lord our God, that the soul of thy servant James, the soul of thy handmaid Eleanor, and the souls of thy servants and handmaids whose memory and anniversary we are especially observing (may enter the abode of peace and bliss, &c.):

(b) the Secretum: Haec munera, queso, Domine, quae oculis tuae maiestatis offerimus, anime famuli tui Iacobi: May these offerings, I pray thee, O God, which we present to the eyes of thy Divine Majesty (be of benefit) to the soul of thy servant James, to the soul of thy handmaid Eleanor, and to the souls, &c.

² ‘We present to thee, O Lord, the offering of our bounden service for the soul of thy servant, bishop Edmund, our benefactor.’

³ ‘Let (this sacrifice) be of benefit, I pray thee, O Lord, to the soul of thy servant, bishop Edmund, our benefactor.’

⁴ Beheaded, 1497.

(c) the Post-Communion: Deus, qui inestimabili misericordia animas mortalium ab angustis transfers ad requiem, propitiare supplicationibus nostris pro anima: O God, who, of thy inestimable mercy, translatest the souls of men from anguish to rest, be favourable to our prayers for the soul of thy servant James, &c.

The College further undertook, for the health of bishop Audley's soul, to pay yearly, on his anniversary, to those who had been present at the Exequies from the versicle¹ *Audivi vocem*² to the antiphon³ *Ego sum*⁴ and at the Mass from the first Kyrie, eleison (said after the Introit) to the third Agnus Dei (said after the Consecration of the elements): viz.—

to the Rector, 2s.; to each of the 12 Fellows, 12d.; to each of the two chaplains,⁵ 8d.; to the Bible-clerk, 4d.; and to a poor-scholar⁶ (pauperculus), 4d.;

and a pittance⁷ of 4s. on that day to augment the fare at the College table.

Further, the College was to invite to bishop Audley's anniversary service in Lincoln College chapel the Vice-chancellor of Oxford University, the two Proctors, the Keeper of the Audley chest, the Esquire Bedells, and the Yeomen Bedells; and to each of these who attends and offers⁸ a mass-penny on the alms-plate, the College was to pay—to the Vice-chancellor, 20d.; to each Proctor, 12d.; to the Keeper of the Audley chest, 12d.; and to each Bedell, 4d.

This obit was first kept on 23 August, 1525. For so long as this service was allowed by law the Vice-chancellor, both Proctors, the Keeper of the Audley chest, and 2, 3, or 4 Bedells attended yearly and received their doles.

In addition to the special and individual Masses celebrated for him, a testator sometimes bargained for mention by name in all other Masses celebrated by such priests as, directly or indirectly, benefited by his benefaction. Thus¹ in Lincoln College, Oxford, Edmund Audley, bishop of Salisbury, bargained (1518) that, at all week-day Masses celebrated in Lincoln College Chapel by any Fellow of the College, the celebrant, during the bishop's life, should make use of the Orison² Rege, queso, Domine, famulum tuum, Edmundum, pontificem, benefactorem nostrum, with suitable mention in Secretum and Post-Communio; and also pray for the souls of the bishop's parents (James Tuchett lord Audley and his wife Eleanor) and the souls of the bishop's friends and benefactors, making use of the orison⁴ Concede, queso, Domine Deus noster, ut anima famuli tui Iacobi, anima amule tue Alianore, et anime famulorum famularumque tuarum quorumcunque vel quarumcunque commemorationem speciali devotione agimus, and making fitting mention of them in Secretum and Post-Communio;—

And, after the bishop's death, shall mention him by name in the ordinary Collect⁵ of the Mass of the Dead: Deus, cuius misericordie non est numerus, suscipe propitius pro anima famuli tui Edmundi pontificis, benefactoris nostri; shall continue the prayer for the bishop's parents (Concedo, queso, Domine: as above⁶); and make fitting mention of him and his parents in Secretum and Post-Communio.

These provisions are typical of the arrangements made, at this period, for intercessory services. They explain, distinctly and fully, what sir John Digby, in 1529, in his will (no. XXV), expected in the way of personal mention in ordinary Masses said by his chantry-priest in Melton Mowbray church. So also Thomas Buck, 1538, in his will (no. LVIII) asks that every Mass said by a conventual priest may be used to commemorate him, by substituting the funeral Psalm⁷ (De profundis clamavi ad te) for the ordinary Psalm⁸ (Lauda, anima mea, Dominum) at the end of Lauds just before beginning Mass.

Leases of prebendal estates. Next in number and volume, to the documents concerned with wills, are those eight which relate to leases of estates belonging to prebendships in Lincoln Minster.

A prebendship was a place of dignity among the clergy of the Minster, which had had settled on it an endowment for the maintenance of its prebendary. The prebendship was named from the parish in which its estate lay, but some prebendships had land in more than one parish. The land seems to have come, in some cases, by grant of manorial land (as apparently¹ in the case of the Buckinghamshire manor, no. XXXIX, possessed by Heydour prebend); in other cases, by appropriation of a rectory, as at Langford, Oxfordshire (no. LXI), and at Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire (no. XLV).

Inasmuch as a prebendary held the prebendal estate only so long as he retained his prebendship, it was impossible for any prebendary, of his own single authority, to grant any lease of the estate which would be at all binding on his successor. When, therefore, it seemed desirable, for the management of such estates, that leases for terms of years should be granted, the assents of the Dean and Chapter and of the Bishop had to be obtained.

The assent of the Dean and Chapter is expressly mentioned in the case of Leighton Buzzard (no. XLV) and Leighton Bromeswold (no. LXII) prebends. The Dean and Chapter's confirmation of no. XLV is recorded in Bishop Longland's Register of Memoranda, lf. 266. Others are probably enrolled in the Chapter-Acts of the Minster.

Ratification by the Bishop involved two acts, (i) affixing his smaller seal to the indentures; (ii) causing the indentures, so confirmed by him, to be enrolled in his Register.

A Bishop had two distinct official seals; a larger one which was attached to the more important deeds issued by his authority; and a smaller one, employed on occasions of less weight or ceremony. This smaller seal was described as his 'seal ad causas', and is constantly mentioned as used to ratify these prebendal leases. In the same way, Oxford Colleges had, and have, two seals — the 'College seal', used in such transactions as conveyance of land; and the 'College seal ad negotia', used when letters testimonial are issued, e.g., to candidates for Holy Orders. See and College followed the King's example (no. XV) in his great seal and privy seal.

These leases, incidentally, give odd scraps of information about different perquisites and different burdens of some of the prebendships.

In some cases, the advowson of the church of the parish, where the prebendal estate was, belonged to the prebend; as, e.g., at Leighton Buzzard (Bedfordshire), at Cropredy and at Langford (both in Oxfordshire), and at East Stoke (Nottinghamshire).

Some prebends, where the prebendary took the great tithe and was 'rector' of the parish, were responsible for the repair of the chancel of their respective churches, as, e.g., Leighton Buzzard, and Langford. Stoke prebend was responsible for the repair of the chancels of four parishes (in Lincolnshire and Nottinghamshire).

Some prebends had to pay part, or the whole, of the stipend of the parish-priest where their estate lay. Thus, Carlton Kyme prebend had to pay the priest's stipend both at Carlton and at Dalby (Lincolnshire). Stoke prebend had to pay half the priest's stipend at Rauceby, Lincolnshire.

Probably all the prebends paid dues to Lincoln Minster. Such dues are expressly mentioned in the cases of Cropredy, Carlton Kyme, Langford, and Stoke.

Most of the eight leases give noticeable examples of the usual covenants as to repairs, as to dates and places of payment of rent, as to powers of distraint and re-entry, and as to bonds which lessor and lessee entered into for due observance of their covenants. The covenants as to timber at Cropredy and Leighton Bromeswold deserve attention; and so also at St. John Baptist's Hospital, Mere.

There are good examples of the way in which a landowner secured for himself lodging and stabling, at his tenant's charge, when he visited an outlying estate, e.g. at Heydour, and at Leighton Buzzard; and at St. John Baptist's Hospital, Mere.

The manorial formula (Godstow English Register, E.E.T.S. lv.) occurs at Walton Manor, Buckinghamshire (owned by Heydour prebend) in the form which was generally in use at this period (no. XXXIX). Another instance of the formula, with some variations, is found (no. LI) in the case of the manor of Mere Hospital, Lincolnshire.

The particulars of the eight prebendal leases mentioned are as follows:

No. XXXIX: Heydour cum Walton prebend: 19 May 1534: lease of Walton manor (Buckinghamshire): 61 years.

XLV: Leighton Buzzard prebend: 8 April 1535: lease of rectory and prebend at Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire: 36 years.

L: Cropredy prebend: 20 February 153 $\frac{5}{8}$: lease of estate at Cropredy, Oxfordshire: 30 years.

LII: Carlton Kyme (alias Carlton cum Dalby) prebend: 26 June 1536: estates at North Carlton and Dalby, Lincolnshire: 40 years.

LIV: Welton Brinkhall prebend: 29 September 1536: estate at Welton (near Lincoln), Lincolnshire: 51 years.

LXI: Langford Ecclesia prebend: 22 March 154 $\frac{1}{2}$: estate at Langford, Oxfordshire: 30 years.

LXII: Leighton Bromeswold prebend: 12 May 1543: land at Leighton Bromeswold, Huntingdonshire: 40 years.

LXIII: Stoke prebend: 27 April 1544: lands and tithes in Lincolnshire and Nottinghamshire: 50 years.

Of exactly the same nature, and requiring the Bishop's confirmation for the same reason and in the same way, is the lease, no. LI, of St. John Baptist's Hospital, Mere, Lincolnshire, 23 April 1536, for 21 years.

Other church and chantry agreements. Just as the Bishop's formal and enrolled sanction was needed to give validity to leases of prebendal estates, so it was required in regard to other agreements between ecclesiastical persons, or in regard to parish churches. In the present series there are five documents of this sort formally enrolled:

No. XIII: 12 July 1458: agreement between the Master of the Chantry at Chalgrave, Bedfordshire, and one of the Chantry priests.

XX: 1464: appeal by Bruerne Abbey, Oxfordshire, to King Edward IV, to have a re-grant of the rectory of Wootton (near Woodstock), Oxfordshire.

No. XXI: 29 June 1509: agreement by Barlings Abbey, Lincolnshire, to augment, temporarily, the stipend of the vicar of Reepham, Lincolnshire.

XL: 27 December 1534: agreement between the rector of Syresham (in Northamptonshire), and Biddlesden Abbey, Buckinghamshire, as to certain tithes in Syresham parish.

LIX: 14 March 1538: lease by Lincoln College, Oxford, to the parishioners of All Saints, in Oxford city, of the vicarial income of their parish, on condition that they provide and pay their parish-priest.

Disciplinary acts of the Bishop in his Ecclesiastical Court.
There are five documents relating to proceedings taken against violators of the Canons :

No. VI: 31 December 1454: certificate from Hampshire that the wife of a Buckinghamshire man is still alive there. But there is no record of proceedings in this (presumably matrimonial) case.

XI: 1457: a lengthy account of objections to the Church sacraments which had been urged by certain Huntingdonshire Lollards, and of the severe penance enjoined them on their recantation.

XII: 1457: proceedings taken against an inhabitant of the town of Hertford, for practising necromancy.

XVI: 1459: proceedings against Richard Pyckard, a duly licensed proctor in the Bishop of Lincoln's Consistorial Court, convicted of forgery and impersonation.

XIX: 1465: severe penance imposed in consequence of the desecration of Grantham churchyard, by assault and effusion of blood there.

Widows' Vows. In these documents there are four separate instances of solemn vows publicly taken upon them by widows, before the Bishop, and formally recorded in the Bishop's Register:

These are—

No. IX: 1456: Joan Stretton: of Lincoln diocese: in Merton College Chapel, Oxford.

XIV: 1458: Isabel Portyngton: of Barton-on-Humber, Lincolnshire, in Black Friars Church, Oxford.

XV: 1459: Joan Manfeld: in Black Friars Church, Oxford.

LIII: 1536: Agnes Wigston: of Leicester town; in the Bishop's Chapel at Buckden, Huntingdonshire.

In each case, the vow itself is in English; and follows, more or less, the words of a set formula. But the record of enrolment is in the formal Latin of the Bishop's official Register. The additional circumstances, that the vow was made during the celebration of Mass, and in presence of the diocesan attired in his episcopal robes, shows that the step thus taken was regarded as of exceptional solemnity and importance.

All remembrance of this vow has, however, so entirely died out in England that I may be permitted to set down here the facts connected with it, from information very courteously given me by Rev. F. E. Brightman, Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford.

(i) In the earliest age, a list of widows was kept who were entitled to receive support from the alms of the Church (cp. 1 Tim. cap. 5, with Acts 6, verse 1; Eusebius, Historia Ecclesiastica, vi. 43 § 11, &c.).

Three of the four votresses in these documents bring their vow formally into connexion with 1 Tim. cap. 5, by the statement that it is 'after the rule of St. Paul'.

(ii) In a later age, widows (whether supported directly by the alms of the Church, or not, is not distinctly apparent) are found in a sort of clerical Order, charged with the duties of visiting the sick and of continual prayer for the welfare of the Church (Clementine Constitutions, 18).

(iii) In the monastic age, just as unmarried women took vows of chastity and virginity, so widows took like vows of continued widowhood and chastity (Apostolical Constitutions, III. 1; S. Ambrose, de Viduis; S. Augustine, de bono Viduitatis), and, after their vow, wore a dress distinctive of their status.

Of these, there were (for a time at least), in the Western Church, two sections:

(a) Widows, who, having taken this vow, were required to live in convents, and so became undistinguishable from nuns;

(b) Widows, who, having taken this vow, continued in secular life. These often acted as deaconesses, and had assigned to them the duties appertaining to the office of deaconess (e.g. at the baptism of women).

So regular an institution was the viduata order in the mediaeval Church that there was a special office for taking this vow: see Edmond Martène, de antiquis Ecclesiae ritibus (1702), II. vii. There is an English example in Rev. H. A. Wilson's The Pontifical of Magdalen College (edited for Henry Bradshaw Society, 1910), pp. 86 sqq.

From this mediaeval office, it will not be out of place to give here, in an English version, the—

*Blessing of the robes of a widow who has taken on herself
the vow of chastity.*

‘O God, maker of all things seen and unseen, of Thy goodness be present now, to bless with the shedding upon them of the dew of Thy grace these robes, the visible token of a holy life, and to hallow them, through Jesus Christ our Lord.’

[Then shall the votress herself take up her veil and place it over her head:

As also the—

Blessing after the taking upon her of the veil.

‘Comfort, O Lord, this Thy handmaiden, now bounden to widowhood and to labour in good works, even as Thou didst vouchsafe to comfort the widow of Sarepta by Elijah the prophet. Grant to her fruits meet for chastity, that she may forget all pleasure of her former estate, and may be wholly without promptings to vice, so that she may submit her neck altogether to Thy yoke only, and thereby may, in return for all her toils, receive, in sixty-fold measure, the delectable gift of holiness, through Jesus Christ our Lord.'

What were the personal and subsidiary reasons which moved English widows, as late as the latter half of the fifteenth and the middle of the sixteenth centuries, to undertake this ancient vow? Several conjectures are possible, but are only bare conjectures.

Socially, and personally, the vow may have been an effective protection against importunities of unwelcome suitors, or against family pressure to take another mate.

Pecuniarily, the votress may have stood a better chance of obtaining a definite appointment as a paid deaconess, or an anchoress or reclusa. These latter places were sometimes possessed of endowment of some sort, and often were remembered in wills of pious people. Thus, in 1533, John Lee, of Fenny Stratford, made a bequest 'to the ancrysse of Poulys'. In 1450, Sir Thomas Cumberworth, in his bequest to a reclusa in Lincoln city, placed her on the same scale as the most favoured head of any Lincoln priory of nuns.

Estates of the See. There is, in this set, one document which stands by itself, no. LVI. It refers to a dispute as to rights of common between the tenants of Uppingham manor and the bishop of Lincoln's tenants at Lyddington, Rutland, apparently in 1538.

Henry VIII's Acts. Three considerable documents deal with Henry VIII's church-legislation:

No. XLVI: 19 June 1535: orders by which the Bishop of Lincoln directed acceptance, throughout his diocese, of the king's claim to be 'Supreme Head on earth' of the Anglican Church, and required erasure, from all Church books, of all expressions which gave the bishop of Rome the style of 'Pope' (Latin 'Papa') or which countenanced the Pope's supremacy.

XLIX: two letters, undated, but one probably of 1535, and the second of a year later, in which the Bishop of Lincoln complained to his archdeacons that the claim of the king to be 'Supreme Head on earth' of the Anglican Church had been preached against, and that the king's directions¹ as to bidding-prayers had been disregarded.

LV: 153⁹/₇: covering letter by the Bishop of Lincoln, enclosing the king's orders for the discontinuance of the public and compulsory observance of several troublesome Holy-days, which interrupted business during the Law-terms, and delayed the harvesting of the crops.

All Saints Church and Parish, Oxford. These documents include (no. LIX) a long and remarkable lease² of the 'vicarage' of their parish to the parishioners of All Saints. The stipulations of this are so singular as to require explanation from outside sources.

All Saints parish was a small parish in the very heart of Oxford. Its church was originally a nave and chancel³, of Decorated period, continuous with each other, the chancel window being of three lights, the three (or four) lower nave windows all of two lights, with several small two-light windows in the clere-story. On the south side of the chancel was added a considerable Lady-chapel⁴, of Decorated style; on the north, rather an ugly but apparently Early English chantry-chapel. There was a square western tower, surmounted by a tall octagonal stone spire. This steeple fell eastwards in 1⁶⁹⁹/₇⁰⁰, crushing in the church. The present church was erected 1708.

Rectory of All Saints. The parish was originally a Rectory, with some sort of estate belonging to it.

'Vicarage' of All Saints. It passed into the possession of S. Frideswyde's Priory, Oxford, and, with the consent of Hugh de Wells, Bishop of Lincoln, was subjected (circ. 1220) to a yearly pension of 40s. payable to that convent. By Anthony Wood (City of Oxford, ii. 109) this is represented as involving reduction to a vicarage, but that is more than doubtful⁵ (ibid., iii. 73). In 1326 the church passed into the patronage of the see of Lincoln.

⁴ 'The Parish Chancel': Wood's

Saints, Oxford. In 1427, Richard Flemyng, bishop of Lincoln, made use¹ of this church as a means towards finding a seat for, and providing part of the endowment of, his newly founded Collegiate Church (afterwards known as Lincoln College, Oxford). This arrangement was definitely confirmed by Thomas Rotherham, bishop of Lincoln, in 1478.

Under Rotherham's arrangements no steps were to be taken to serve the cure of All Saints parish by a permanent vicar.² The College was to provide a yearly stipend³ of 53s. 4d., by which a 'chaplain' was to be hired to discharge all the duties incumbent on a parish priest. This chaplain was to be appointed, and removed, by the Rector of Lincoln College, at his own pleasure. Throughout Lent, however, this chaplain was always to have the assistance of a Fellow of the College in his sacerdotal functions.

The College was to pay all tenths and other charges due by the church; to keep the chancel in repair; and to provide communion-elements, incense, consecrated oil, tapers, and candles, e.g.⁴—

'1514, to John Cook, for whygt-lymyng the chauncell in All-halon cherch, 3s.; for glasying off the wyndoo in the chancell of All halon chyrche, 3s.'

'housling' = communicabilis = the Statutable attendance of Lincoln College at All Saints Church.

The lease mentions the requirements of the College Statutes (codified³ 11 February 1479/80). The Rector and every Fellow (save one⁴) of the College must attend service in All Saints Church on every one of the Greater Festivals. In addition, the College was to provide three sermons in English in each year, viz. on Easter day and on All Saints day, by the Rector; and on the dedication-day of the church (November 18th), by one of the Fellows.

Yearly rent. The yearly rent stipulated for by the College in this lease (53*s*. 4*d*.) is peculiar, coinciding with the yearly stipend⁵ originally assigned by the College Statutes to the chaplain who served the cure of All Saints Church. Possibly this sum was retained with a view to leaving undisturbed the labyrinth of traditional details according to which the College Bursar's yearly Calculus was made out.

⁶ A year of great mortality, so bringing in an exceptional number of burial-fees, masses, and mortuaries: see pp. 27, 28.

In regard, therefore, to the apparent smallness of the probable income and the considerable burdens undertaken under the lease (no. LIX) of the 'vicarage', All Saints parish may seem to have made a bad bargain. It did not, however, regret it, and when the original lease was running out, the parish renewed it :

'1560, for sealinge wax for the churchmen's¹ lease² of Allhallows, 2*d*.'

The sources of this income were altar-dues ; Easter dues ; private tithes ; petty tithes ; Sunday pence.

The altar-dues included all offerings at Masses, whether ordinary or commemorative ; all offerings before crosses or images of saints (no. XII) ; all fees at funerals, marriages, and churchings ; all bequests to the altar.³

The Easter dues were customary payments collected at Easter from all householders and communicants by the churchwardens of the parish. On the day when the amount was paid over to the College, the College provided a refection for the churchwardens :

'1487, to Mr. Smyth [vintner], for wine at the reckoning of tithes at Easter, 6*d*.'

'1532, for good ayle at the end of the account on Easter day, 1*d*.'

These gifts, strictly called 'offerings'⁴ were also called 'tithe',⁵ as above. They probably account for the constant bequests⁶ in these wills of small sums to parish-churches as conscience-money for "tithes forgotten." Such conscience-money was also paid by parishioners in their life-time. Thus All Saints Church received—

'1505, of a good woman for tithe, 10*d*.'

'1512, of a woman for forgotten tithe, 2*d*.'

Private tithes, strictly defined, appear to be offerings made by individuals in respect of income not titheable in the ordinary way. At Oxford, graduates seem to have paid to their parish-church 'tithe' in respect of lecture-fees received by them. I have noted no instance of this in All Saints parish, but there are two in St. Michaels, North Gate :

'1507, about Easter: received from Mr. Deke,¹ for his lectures, in private tithes, . . . 2'

'1507, about June: received of Mr. Perkins for his lectures in private tithes, 3s. 4d.'

Conscience-money was also paid in respect of these private tithes. Thus, All Saints Church received—

'1513, of a Baysler³ of Martyn College, for a other man whoys conceyans dyd gruge hym for his privy tythes, 3d.'

Petty Tithes accrued from gardens attached to houses in the parish. In most cases, perhaps, this tithe was brought-in in kind, and went to the College kitchen, without being notified in the accounts. One garden, or orchard, in All Saints parish long continued to make payment, or commutation-payment, on this account:

1582, of Mr. Thomas Furse, for tythe-aples, 2s. 6d. 1586 of Mr. Fures, for tythe-wardens, 12d. 1641, Henry Carter, tithes for garden, 6d. 1654, Mr. Thomas Wallis' garden tithe, 6d.

Sunday pence was a charge of 1d. for each Sunday in the year (but doubled in Christmas, Easter, Ascension and Whit weeks; and so 4s. 8d. in all yearly), levied on every house in the parish of 40s. yearly value and upwards. About 1521 it was disputed. In the Diocesan Registry at Peterborough is an Act-book of John Cocks, vicar-general of the Archbishop of Canterbury, with entries 1521 to 1523. It has much to say about the suit then begun by Lincoln College against John Clerke, poticary, of St. Michael's parish, Oxford, to enforce payment.⁴ In 1532, All Saints parish, after a meeting with the College, agreed to continue payment: '1532, for wyne whan we warre att a-grement with the parishe off Allhallows to offer on the Sundays, 16d.'

In 1566, there were 25 houses in All Saints still paying Sunday pence: 'for five and twenty houses, paying 14d. quarterly, £5 16s. 8d.'

This church-tax was collected by the churchwardens and paid in, with the amount collected for Easter dues (p. 25), each Easter.

to pestilence seem strange, but there is abundant evidence, in the Bursar's Yearly Account in Lincoln College archives, that they were actual necessities. All Saints (supra p. 22) was a very small parish, in the heart of Oxford. On the west, a fringe of garden grounds separated it from St. Martin's parish; on the north, the quadrangles of Lincoln and Brasenose colleges provided open spaces. But near the church there were several narrow airless alleys running out of the High Street into back lanes, and rows of houses overlooking from each side the overcrowded churchyard. There was no water-supply except by shallow, contaminated wells. Pestilences were, therefore, of almost regular occurrence every summer. Even the broken series of yearly accounts of Lincoln College shows an unceasing succession of epidemics.

1507: August and September: the parish was swept by pestilence. Among the victims were two Fellows of Lincoln College; the Rector's servant-lad: and three 'pauperculi' (boy-servitors), one of them the Bible-clerk. The Rector and most of the Fellows left Oxford, July to November, leaving only two Fellows to keep the College going.

1508: September and October: return of pestilence: only three Fellows of Lincoln College in residence. One Fellow died of the epidemic in August.

1509: continued pestilence. One of the College victims was a poor-scholar, or young student-servant, whose battells were written off as a bad debt.

1512: renewed pestilence: more than half the College withdrew, July to August, to Chilton by Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire. On re-assembling, at beginning of September, half the College withdrew, for other six weeks, to Hampton-Poyle, Oxfordshire.

1514: renewed pestilence: one victim was the Sub-rector of Lincoln College. Lincoln College dispersed. Between 19 August and 14 October there were 34 burials in All Saints parish, mostly of young people.

1525: pestilence in summer: one Fellow of Lincoln College died in May. The College dispersed. One Fellow, Martin Lyndsey, D.D., being suspected of the infection, was put in quarantine, but continued in receipt of his dining allowances, in May:

'alowyd to Mr. Doctor Lynsey for 3 weeks commons (Ascension weke² beynge one of them) by cause he shold not company with us for fer of the sekness, 4*s.* 4*d.*'

1526: grievous pestilence: in the first week in July the burials in All Saints parish were 21 in number, including a Fellow of Lincoln College. Allowances were made by Lincoln College to the College servants during 23 weeks in which the College was absent. Three Fellows only kept house³ in Oxford; the rest of the College partly dispersed to their own homes, partly lived (as a skeleton College) in a hired house, first at Launton,⁴ afterwards at Hampton Poyle. William Hynkerfeld, a B.A. Fellow, was put in quarantine: Allowed—

'for Syr Hynkerfeld his commens, quod infectabatur, for 24 weeks, 33*s.* 8*d.*' 1527: pestilence in summer and autumn, the Sub-rector of Lincoln College succumbing to it in the second week in July. The Fellows partly dispersed to their own homes, partly lived together, keeping up a form of College exercises, in a hired house at Combe Longa, Oxfordshire.

the survivors of the great Athenian plague, that they had become plague-proof.

⁴ Near Bicester, Oxfordshire.

1536: pestilence from October to December: the Fellows partly dispersed, partly lived in a hired house at Launton, Oxfordshire.

1544: pestilence for 22 weeks, from the beginning of June, Lincoln College withdrew to Bucknell, north of Bicester, Oxfordshire, leaving two Fellows only to keep house in Oxford.

These particulars, interesting in themselves as evincing the unhealthiness of English towns in the first half of the sixteenth century, fully account for the plague-provisos of the 1538^s All Saints lease in this series of documents:

(i) that the Rector and Fellows were in continual expectation of claiming, on account of pestilence in Oxford, absence from their statutable attendance at the services in All Saints Church;

(ii) that, in many weeks of sickness, the parish-priest of All Saints needed help in his sacerdotal functions.

Origin of Parish Registers in England. The year 1538, in which the churchwardens of All Saints were negotiating their lease and arranging for its ratification by the Bishop and subsequent enrolment in the Bishop's Register, brought compulsory registration of baptisms, weddings, and Burials into the parish-system in England. This is not noticed in these documents, but the matter is so important that occasion may be taken of the mention of this church to make public the new light which its records¹ throw on this subject.

In September, 30 Henry VIII (1538), an Injunction, sent out by Thomas, baron Cromwell, the King's Vicar-general, required every parish-church to provide itself with a book in which to record baptisms, weddings, and burials. Into this book, Sunday by Sunday, the officiating minister had to enter every baptism, wedding, or burial which had taken place on that Sunday, or on any of the six preceding days. There has been a school of writers who would not admit that any custom found in England can be of English origin. Accordingly, Cromwell is assumed to have picked up this registration-scheme from what he found established at Florence during his residence there (about 1515) or in the Spanish Netherlands (which he visited somewhat later). In order to prevent the marriage of such persons, as had, through their sponsors, been artificially brought within prohibited degrees of affinity, the principal church of Florence, at the time of Cromwell's visit, kept a register of children baptized, with the names of their sponsors. So, in the Spanish Netherlands, like records were kept, under the impulse of an edict originally issued in 1497, by the Primate of Spain, Francisco Ximenes de Cisnero, Archbishop of Toledo. Cromwell, it has been alleged, in 1538, copied these records, but extended them so as to include weddings and burials. But the records of All Saints and of St. Michael's North Gate parishes, Oxford, show a system of weekly registration in regular use before Thomas Cromwell was born, as well as during his youth before his residence abroad.

On each Sunday, one Fellow of Lincoln College attended at All Saints Church, and another Fellow attended at St. Michael's Church, to make a note in his book of all churchings of women, all weddings, and all burials which took place that day or had taken place in the week preceding; with a statement of the offerings, or fees, which had been paid in each case. Baptisms, of course, were not recorded, because no fee, directly or indirectly, was asked for baptism; but the births of children are sufficiently indicated by the thank-offerings of their mothers.

The natural inference is, that similar records were kept in all churches—and there were not a few such in England—in which the cure was served by a chaplain, but the altar-offerings belonged to some religious house or secular College. Cromwell, therefore, in his Injunctions of 1538, did no more than impose on all parish-churches a registration-system which had long been (regularly, if somewhat laxly) in use in many.

that is (for the six years, and in the two parishes) 87 churchings ; 29 weddings ; 205 burials.

Surely after this plain statement of plain facts, it can never again be asserted that Church Registration in England began in 1538 by importation from Italy or from the Spanish Netherlands.

Payment in kind. A special and frequent feature of these documents is payment not in coin, but in goods. A testator, giving a bequest to a church or to a relative, very often bestows not money, but a sheep, or a lamb, or so much barley or malt. A ready explanation of such bequests is found in the undoubted fact that the value of stock and grain was subject to great and unforeseen fluctuations, not only from year to year, but from month to month. If, therefore, stock and grain, at the time of the execution of a will, should command high prices, a testator was willing that his legatees should reap the benefit of the favourable market prices of the items of his bequest to them ; but if it happened that the will had to be given effect to in a time of depressed prices, a testator was willing that his executors should not be troubled with in the Bodleian, and are accessible there for checking every statement of fact here made. Lincoln College, in its new Archives-room, has dealt worthily by the original documents.

making good the fall in the market value of his bequests. But, it must be observed, that the perpetual recurrence of bequests in kind is plain evidence that coin, the medium of exchange, was then not readily available. It was much easier to transact business by barter of goods than by money payment. Accordingly, we find (no. XVI) an I. O. U. for £20 cancelled on payment in malt and in sheep, 1459. An odd letter, preserved in the oddest of ways, carries this scarcity of circulating capital down to the Commonwealth period.

Dr. Edward Hyde, of Brightwell, Berkshire, who died 1659, in writing one of his sermons¹ ran out of paper, and had recourse to the backs of some old letters. One of these was from Geoffrey Pope, an officer in Colonel Barnes' regiment in Wardour Castle, Wiltshire, and asked leave to pay a debt 'in sheep, for money is a scarce commodity in this country' (= county).

SIXTY-THREE

LINCOLN DIOCESE DOCUMENTS

1450-1544

I: Will, 1450, of Joan Buckland, widow of Richard Buckland, of Edgcott, Northamptonshire.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 55 to lf. 56. In the same Register, at lf. 84 bk. to 85 bk., is a second copy of this will. In this second copy the surname always appears as 'Bokeland'; and the verb 'wol', or 'woll', is generally 'will', but sometimes 'wyll'. The chief other variants of the second copy are given in the footnotes. Some slight clerical errors in the first copy have been corrected from the second copy without comment.

This Dame Buckland was a notable housemistress, and her enumeration of, and division of, her household and personal effects are pleasingly minute and distinct.

One of her phrases invites a note, since it touches on a point as to bed-linen which occurs in several other of these wills, but is now practically forgotten. Linen was then woven in a long narrow web, incapable of providing a sheet of sufficient width for any ordinary bed. The usual practice was to take three lengths from such a web and sew them together at their edges so as to form a sheet of the desired width. This arrangement had the advantage, from the point of view of household economy, that, when the middle strip grew thin by use, the long seams could be unpicked, and one of the less worn side-strips put in the middle, removing the original middle-strip to the edge. When this fresh middle-strip became thin in its turn, it changed places with the other side-strip. Each of these strips was called, in English, a 'leaf', or a 'breadth'; in Latin, a folium. Dame Buckland uses 'leaf'. Half-widths occur; e.g. sheets of 'two leaves and a half', some apparently for coverlets,¹ others for narrower beds. Ancient beds were constructed for two, or even several, persons sleeping together. Shakespeare, in Twelfth Night, mentions the then proverbial 'great bed of Ware', in Hertfordshire, which required a sheet of twelve feet square.

Dame Buckland's bequests include four service-books, catalogued, in the way then in universal use, by the first words of the recto of their second leaf. Such books, to begin their first leaf, had generally a more or less elaborate illumination, so that the first words of the second leaf supplied a simpler distinctive mark by which to recognize them.

II: Will, 145^o_I, of Sir Thomas Cumberworth, Knight, of Somerby by Glanford Brigg, Lincolnshire.

From bishop Marmaduke Lumley's Register at Lincoln, lf. 43 to lf. 46 bk. This document is in a somewhat difficult hand, and the reading in some words is quite doubtful. A feature of the deed is the abandonment of the old y, to make use of 'y'. The testator disposes of a noteworthy collection of relics, of several devotional books, and of a MS. of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. The devotional books seem to have partly come from religious houses (Grace Dieu priory in Leicestershire, and an unnamed Friary). Special mention is made of a Latin Psalter (David sauter); of Walter Hilton's (died 1396) de vita contemplativa et activa, or, at least, of the second part of it; and of de vita Christi, possibly the treatise by Ludovicus de Saxonia, but see Bonaventura's Speculum vitae Christi (as noticed in Oseney English Register, E.E.T.S., 1913, p. ix.) Some slight peculiarities of the hand have been purposely omitted, e.g. a sort of contraction mark over will, several false starts, and a flourish at end of proper names.

² sic: read 'knowen'.

³ 'holdyn [in],' i. e. bound by.

⁴ John Kemp, archbishop of York, 1426: cardinal-priest, 1439; archbishop of Canterbury, 1452.

⁵ Probably in error for 'cloping'.

And I will the kirk of Stayn haue the littill halfe bruche that es with relikys. (b) to the church of Stain in Withern, Lincolnshire. Bequests of church plate, vestments and ornaments to Somerby church, and testator's chantry there, including both those already placed there, and those ordered but not yet delivered.

Also, I will that the kirke of Somerethby & my chauntre prests & ther Successurs haue ye chalis, bokys, vestmentes, copys, 5 Surplys, ij. superaltares, Sensurs, crossys, candilstyks of laton or coper and gilt, as I in my life deuided yam be indenture.

Also, I will that al the onormentes ordend be me for ye auter, for the rode loft, for the crosses, & for obetes, with vestementes & chalis & All othir things, be [by] indenture gyfen to my 10 chauntre prest[s] to kepe, be ye awisse & owrsight of myn hayres, yai & it¹ to worschip & serue gode in the qwer of Somerby kirke on heledays after the ordynall & yer poure, yer-to² I ordand yer bokys & vestmentes als velle as to serue my chauntre prests dayle.

And I wil it be doyn at Somerethby with note⁶ be the parson & my chauntre prests if it may & that my said chauntre prests

¹ These three words are wrong: possibly = 'therewith'.

² Text obviously faulty. Meaning seems to be that testator intended service-books and vestments to be used in the parish services as well as in the services of his chantry.

³ 'And I will' is repeated in error.

⁴ In error for 'that they'.

⁵ See notes 3 and 4, p. 45.

⁶ 'cum nota', possibly = with mention of deceased by name in the Collects of the commemorative services: p. 11. Another explanation is 'with music', as opposed to a plain read service (submissa voce).

Testator's chantry-priests are to be given a written list of these provisions.

Orders to be observed by testator's chantry-priests.

Endowment for these chantry priests, and for the parish clergy to have intercessory services for souls of testator and wife and all Christian souls. Orders as to these services in Somerby church.

⁵ Leo de Welles, 6th baron Welles, and his son Richard de Welles, 7th baron: both, in their turn, afterwards attainted.

⁶ Stanhope.

⁸ 'further', i.e. help.

[Note.]

[There is also a Latin will of Lord Willoughby, on lf. 42 bk. of bishop John Chedworth's register, dated January 9, 1448. He says he has already made a will, and requires his executors to act justly. He says the bishop of Lincoln,¹ Viscount Beaumont,² Lord Fitzhugh,³ Lord Cromwell,⁴ Iohn Portyngton, and others, are feoffed in various manors and tenements belonging to him. His wife is to have her dowry immediately on his death, from these manors, on condition that she makes Lord Cromwell⁴ stay any actions that he may have against his executors, on account of any writing, or cause, touching himself. And, if his feoffees in the manors he mentions refuse to perform his wishes, his wife is to have her dowry from other manors. He says also that Lord Leo de Wells⁵ might possibly bring actions against his executors on account of writings, or agreements.]

VI: Official Letter, 1454, from Christchurch, in Hampshire, testifying that Margery, wife of John Simon alias Grice, is still alive.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 20 bk. The letter was no doubt enrolled in respect of some matrimonial suit. The following notes taken from the official minute-book of the Archdeacon of Essex may serve, although of much later date, to suggest the nature and the frequency of such suits.

2 May, 1592 : before the Official of the Archdeacon of Essex, in a Court held in Romford chapel, Essex, Susan Clarke of Barking, Essex, accused of bigamy, produced a certificate from householders of Tattershall, Lincolnshire, that her pretended husband . . . Bowlt, and also her pretended husband . . . Gryse, had both of them wyves lyving when they maryed with Susan : and afterwards, and by due order of lawe, she was separated from them both. She produced also a certificate that her husband, William Clarke, was recently deceased. The charge was withdrawn.

3 May, 1592 : before the Official of the Archdeacon of Essex, in a Court held in Ingatestone church, Essex, John Wylson of Laindon Hills, was ordered to bring a certificate of his marriage with Joan Streates ; and to answer the charge that, at the time of that marriage, he had another wif lyvinge.

5 May, 1592, Richard Weston, of Sutton, Essex, was brought into the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, held at Maldon, because suspected to have two wives alive, and not lawfully maryed to her that he now kepeth. His defence was that his first wife (Ellen Browne) had died at Fulham beyond London.

24 April, 1593, Jaspas Harman, of Grays Thurrock, Essex, was prosecuted in a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex held in Romford chapel, on the charge that he hath ii. wyves. His plea was : about xvi. yeres agone he was married in Eastwood church, Essex, to Margaret Battell, with whom he continued about 10 or 12 yeres ; and since that time, about a yeare last past, he was married in Rushmore parish church, neare vnto Ipswich in Suffock, to Agnes Ive, with whome he continueth ; and that both the same women are yet living, and he not deforced from any of them.

He was ordered to stand in Romford market, next market-day, in a white sheet, with a writing on his head setting forth his offence. The Bailiff of the market was to see and certify that this was done.

VIII: Will, 145 $\frac{4}{5}$, with two codicils, of William, seventh baron Lovel of Tichmarsh, whereby provision was made for the foundation of a two-priest chantry-chapel in the Greyfriars Convent, Oxford, and there was laid down a complicated entail of testator's estates among his four sons and their heirs male.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 22 bk. to lf. 26. The estate was a large and complicated one; and the ultimate division of its members, under entail, between testator's four sons was far from simple. The intention of the will and codicils is also greatly obscured by the absence of information as to the most important item of the demise, viz. the estates settled on testator's eldest son (his successor in his baronies).

The Lovel family was by origin of Minster Lovel, Oxfordshire. According to the Peerages accessible to me, the testator, William Lovel, at the age of 17, succeeded his father John Lovel (6th baron), in 1414, as 7th baron Lovel (of Tichmarsh, Northamptonshire), and was summoned as a baron to Parliament from 1425 to 1453. He also succeeded his father in the barony of Holland (or Holand), which had been brought into the Lovel family by the marriage of Maud, granddaughter and heiress of Robert de Holland, 2nd baron Holland (1342-73), to John, 5th baron Lovel, testator's grandfather. The barony of Burnell, to which the testator here asserts his claim, seems to have been without official recognition. Edward Burnell, first baron Burnell, was summoned to Parliament 1311 to 1314, but died 1315, leaving his sister Maud as his heiress. At his death the barony of Burnell became, in law, extinct. Maud Burnell married, as her first husband, John Lovel, 2nd baron Lovel of Tichmarsh, who died 1314; and as her second husband, Sir John Haudlo, summoned to Parliament as baron Haudlo 1342. By one of the perplexing intricacies of the Peerage writs, the summonses to Parliament, 1350-1420, directed to baron Burnell, were sent to Maud Burnell's descendants by her second marriage, but the Lovel family seems to have obstinately, in word at least, persevered in its claim to the title.

The whole proceeding can best be understood by a rough pedigree:

The Peerage problems are worked out in the larger modern Peerages. All that concerns us here is to note that these accumulated peerages brought into the Lovel family not only the ownership of the estates of those baronies, but also, according to the ideas of the age, the obligation to provide and maintain intercessory services for members of the extinct families (supra 68/20). Hence, testator's intense desire for a perpetual two-priest chantry.

William Lovel, 7th baron Lovel, by a marriage which reminds us of the epigram Tu, felix Austria, nubes, had brought into his family, besides the two baronies he inherited, and the barony he claimed, two other baronies. He had, therefore, an exceptional number of manors to dispose of in his will. If we had access to his marriage-settlement, we should probably find that it directed him to entail certain of his wife's manors on their younger sons.

The foundation of this chantry-chapel might well be used as a foot-note appended to a lament over the vanity of human wishes, as expressed in the telling lines of Robert Burns:

The best laid schemes o' mice an' men

Gang aft agley.

Greyfriars Convent in Oxford, by the fame of Roger Bacon, was the best-known house of the Order in England. Its church was one of the greatest. But, at the Dissolution, it was so completely destroyed, that all memory of the Lovel chapel was rooted out. Anthony Wood (City of Oxford, ii. 383), making his list of eminent persons buried in this church, has no mention of William, Lord Lovel. The fact was first brought to light by Alfred Gibbons in his list of Early Lincoln Wills, 1888. Even the admirable monograph on The Grey Friars in Oxford, by A. G. Little (O.H.S. 1892) could only add (p. 106) that in the arrangements made by lord Lovel for his burial here 'a bequest would no doubt be included'. Railway cuttings, botanists tell us, often bring back to a district plants long extinct there, and so now Dr. Furnivall's research has brought to light this long-forgotten Lovel chantry in Oxford.

[These Articles Englished.]

List of heretical tenets publicly maintained by William Sparke and his brother Richard Sparke, of Somersham, in the diocese of Lincoln, and afterwards publicly acknowledged by them before John, lord bishop of Lincoln.

* 1. Crosses and Images set up in Churches ought not to be worshipped; and offerings ought not to be made at them, since they are only stocks and stones. A human being had better worship a man with arms stretched out cross-wise, since that is a true cross and image of God.

2. Pilgrimages ought not to be made to places where the bodies of saints rest. The expenditure incurred in such pilgrimages is wasted, and the toil undergone is profitless.

3. A child whose parents have been baptized has no need of baptism, and ought not to be baptized, since its parents' baptism is sufficient for it.

4. Laymen who are married or who are engaged in manual labour are not bound to fast. Christ is nowhere found to have instituted fastings of this sort. The Canonical Rule of the Church put forward in this respect is binding only on clerics and on inmates of convents.¹

5. To bury a corpse in consecrated ground does the soul of the dead person no more good than if the corpse had been thrust into a bog. The solemnities of funerals were invented to provide fees for money-loving priests. It would be better if funeral expenses went in alms to the poor than to enrich priests.

6. A priest has no more power to make 'the body of Christ' than the wheat-stalk has. After the words of consecration the bread remains only bread as before; and, in fact, is debased by having had such spell-words pronounced over it.

7. Thirty breads² of this sort are sold for one halfpenny, but Christ was sold for thirty pence. The sacrament after this fashion is therefore a figment devised to enrich priests.

8. Confession made to a believer of the Lollard sect is more soul-healing than confession made to a priest.

9. Inasmuch as God is the searcher of all hearts and the knower of all secrets, an unspoken prayer is just as good as a spoken prayer, and a prayer made in a field or other unconsecrated place is just as efficacious as if it were made in a church.

10. The sole requisite for a valid marriage is mutual consent between the man and the woman, and no other solemnity is needed to justify their living together as man and wife. The marriage-service was brought in solely to provide fees for priests.

11. Extreme unction does not benefit the soul of any man. The only result of this anointing ('greasing,' we call it in English) is to dirty and make vile the person's body.

12. The Pope is Antichrist; priests are the disciples of Antichrist. All persons in Holy Orders are incarnate devils.

13. Every human being is called 'the church of God'. Therefore, if any Lollard is brought before the judge of an ecclesiastical court and required to answer the question Dost thou believe in the Church? he may answer without scruple I do; since by his belief in the Church he states only that he believes in man, who is 'the temple of God'.

14. Each of the accused publicly admitted that, in a large meeting of Lollards, he had solemnly taken oath upon the Bible (i) that he would use his utmost diligence to bring into the Lollard sect as many as ever he could prevail upon, and (ii) that he would reveal to no outsider the existence of the sect or the names of its adherents until they were strong enough in numbers to destroy Antichrist and all Antichrist's disciples; and this (he at that time asserted) would soon be.

manual work.

² i.e. communion-wafers for the laity.

[Notes on the preceding Articles.]

1. That a man with outstretched arms is 'an image of God' seems to be a Lollard exposition of Gen. i. 27, 'God created man in his own image.'

A gift of money to a particular image, or to an altar dedicated to a particular saint in a church, was a recognized act of devotional charity. In many cases, a donor silently left a coin on the pedestal of the image or on the altar, just as nowadays a charitable visitor drops a coin into an alms-box in a church. At one time, it is on record that such offerings were of appreciable value. When Westminster Abbey, on 21 October, 1356, impropriated the rectory of Sawbridgeworth, Hertfordshire, special covenant was made that 'all oblations in any wise so ever offered to the image of the Blessed Mary' in that church should go to Westminster Abbey, not to the vicar of Sawbridgeworth.

Lincoln College accounts have these notes in respect of this custom at All Saints Church, Oxford:

'1505, Sexagesima week, $\frac{1}{2}d.$ was found on the altar of St. Anne.

1510, June, a stranger woman offered 1*d.* at the image of All Saints.

1517, received in oblations before the image of the Saviour, 3*d.*; in oblations before the image of St. Mildred, 2*d.*

1527, Aug., received in several oblations at the image of the Saviour, 2*d.*'

2. The southern pilgrimage, from Southwark to the shrine of Thomas Becket at Canterbury had (1383), long before this, provided Chaucer with the framework of his Canterbury Tales. Huntingdonshire folk were probably more familiar with the pilgrimage to Walsingham in Norfolk. At Little Walsingham there was a chapel dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, beside which was a spring (St. Mary's well or the Holy well). A cross stood on a stone slab under the edge of this spring. Here pilgrims knelt, while they secretly wished for what they wanted, and afterwards threw a piece of gold on the slab—A Description of England and Wales (1769), iv. 266. A popular tune ('Walsingham') took its title from this pilgrimage: Clark's Shirburn Ballads (1907), p. 245. Foreign pilgrimages, taken (at this period) to Compostella in Spain, to Triers or Cologne, or the Santa Casa at Loretto in Italy, were both toilsome and costly.

3. In their teaching as to the sacrament of baptism, these Lollards took up an exaggerated 'Traducian' position. In orthodox doctrine it was maintained that original sin was transmitted from parents to child. The Lollards maintained that, in like manner, the grace conferred by baptism was transmitted from baptized parents to child. Baptism, in such cases, was therefore superfluous, since the grace it was supposed to confer had been inherited at birth.

4. The official canons of the Church, after some centuries of varying practice, had finally appointed, as of obligation, abstinence from flesh and fowl on Fridays and Wednesdays weekly; on the vigils (or eves) of Sundays and Festivals; on Saturdays (as well as on Wednesdays and Fridays) in the Ember weeks; and, especially, during the forty days of Lent. Transgressions of these fasts were sedulously sought out by the officials of the Ecclesiastical Courts, and the transgressors brought into Court and punished, often severely. The Lollard position was that these rules ought not to be imposed on the laity. It was perhaps emphasized by an exposition of St. Matt. ix. 14, 'thy disciples fast not.'

5. Burial within the walls of a church meant a considerable fee (latterly 6s. 8d.) to the rector of the parish, if the grave were in the chancel; to the churchwardens, on the parish account, if it were elsewhere in church. A grave in the churchyard meant a small fee to the churchwardens. There were also the fees of the parish-priest, the parish-clerk, and the ringer of the knell at the actual funeral. See the lease of All Saints Church, Oxford, 1539, and the notes about that church in the Forewords.

6. The Lollard position as regards Transubstantiation, a dogma made obligatory by the first Lateran Council, 1215.

7. An attempt at a reductio ad absurdum argument. If the host were the body of Christ it should be worth, even at Judas's valuation, 30 silver-pennies (St. Matt. xxvi. 15), how then could a wafer be the body of Christ when it could be bought for $\frac{1}{80}$ d.?

8. Apparently the Lollard exposition of St. James v. 16: 'Confess your faults one to another.'

9. 1 Chron. xxviii. 9; well known because taken into an introductory Collect in the Ordinary of the Mass in the use of Sarum, whence it has passed into the Anglican service-book.

10. This tenet fixed itself firmly in the minds of the lower people. In Elizabeth's reign and later the Archdeacons' courts were constantly appealed to by churchwardens to deal with cases where a man and a woman, after publication of banns, lived together as man and wife, without marriage in church. An excellent example is found in the Archdeacon of Colchester's Court, held at Henham, Essex, 27 Nov. 1620, when action was taken against Nicholas Searle and Elizabeth Dye, of Saffron Walden, for 'livinge together, the banes of matrimonye beinge asked longe since, and not married'. The legislation of the Commonwealth made this, for the time, legal and normal. See, e. g., Essex Arch. Soc. Transactions, vol. xiii. pt. 3 (Jan. 1914).

11. Unction might be recognized by St. James v. 14, but this use of oil was a frequent subject of popular gibes. It is so found as late as Sir Walter Scott's Waverley, chap. lxii.

12. The deadly hatred which later controversy directed against the Pope and Romanist clergy (see verses and woodcuts in Ballad Society's issues), as a dreaded foreign and hostile power, was felt by Lollards against the whole Church, Anglican as well as Roman.

13. This carefully-taught equivocation, by which Lollards were trained to meet the searching inquiries of Ecclesiastical Courts, is a remarkable addition to the history of casuistry. It rests on a Lollard exposition of 1 Cor. iii. 16 ('Know ye not that ye are the temple of God').

14. Is it possible that there was in 1457, in mid-England, a militant Lollard party, secretly mustering forces with a view to an armed rising? It is conceivable that traditions of the Peasants' Revolt of 1381 had been handed on from father to son and grandson. In the south, Henry V's ruthless proceedings against Sir John Oldcastle (1414-17) may have crushed the spirits and strength of the Lollards, only to leave smouldering fires of discontent further north.

[III. Formal Act of Excommunication.]

Richard Sparke and William Sparke having been convicted, on their own confession, of holding heretical opinions, have thereby ipso facto come under the sentence of the greater excommunication, which is therefore formally pronounced against them by John, bishop of Lincoln.

[IV. Conditional Absolution from the Excommunication.]

In regard that Richard Sparke² is sorry for his heresies, the bishop consents to remove the sentence of excommunication pronounced against him, so soon as he has made a public and solemn abjuration of his errors.

[Simplified English rendering of the Public Penance imposed on the Somersham Lollards by the Ecclesiastical Court.]

[A.] John Chedworth, bishop of Lincoln, issued a mandate to the Rural Dean of Huntingdon, the Rural Dean of St. Ives, the Rector (or his

¹ 'coniunctim' is the more usual word in this formula.

² This word is a doubtful expansion of an indistinct contraction.

parochial deputy¹) of Somersham, and the parochial chaplain of Ramsey, all in Huntingdonshire.

[B.] He informed them that William Sparke, and Richard Sparke, of Somersham, Huntingdonshire,

(i) had been informed against as holding Lollard opinions and consorting with Lollards;

(ii) had been, with reason, suspected by the bishop's court of these offences;

(iii) had been cited to appear before the Ecclesiastical Court, to answer articles involving charges of heresy;

(iv) had attended the Court; and answered in person, when their names were called out;

(v) and had admitted that the articles alleged against them represented, one by one, the heads of their teaching.

[C.] Thereupon, William Sparke and Richard Sparke,

(vi) had been told that these tenets of theirs were false, heretical, and contrary to the decision of the holy Roman church;

(vii) had desired to abandon their heretical tenets, and in future to cleave to Catholic doctrine and observe the unity of the Church;

(viii) had expressed their abhorrence of their past heresies, as being in contradiction to the Catholic faith and the holy Roman church; and had done so publicly and in writing;

(ix) had submitted themselves to be dealt with by the Court, making humble petition to be absolved from the greater excommunication which they had, by these offences, brought on themselves;

(x) and had asked that such penance, as should be thought adequate to their offences, should be put upon them.

[D.] Wherefore, the Ecclesiastical Court, remembering that the bosom of the Church is ever open to those who seek reconciliation, and that God willeth not the death of a sinner but that the sinner should rather be converted and live,

(xi) exacted of William Sparke and Richard Sparke a solemn oath that in future they would avoid like offences;

(xii) absolved them from the greater excommunication;

(xiii) and imposed upon them this following form of penance, viz.—

[E.] William Sparke and Richard Sparke shall, each of them,

(xiv) clad only in his breeches and his shirt, bearing a fagot on his neck and shoulders, and carrying a penny wax-candle (lighted) in his hand;

(xv) once on the usual market-day, in full market-time, meekly, as a penitent, walk round the public market-place of the town of Huntingdon;

¹ The impropriation of ancient Rectories by monasteries had introduced considerable variance, and therefore doubt, as to the actual title of the parson in effective charge of the parish (vicar, or chaplain, or curate). It was only Victorian legislation which produced uniformity of title, by directing that every parish-parson, who was not Rector, should be called Vicar. Since 1868, if the parson receives the corn-tithes and is responsible for the repairs of the chancel, he is Rector; otherwise, Vicar.

once, in the same way, walk round the market-place of St. Ives; once, on a Sunday or Holy-day (when the procession takes place and there is therefore a great attendance of people), in the same way, walk round the Churchyard of Somersham; and once, in the same way, round the Churchyard of Ramsey;

(xvi) and, when this penance has been fully done, shall, on bended knees, humbly offer what remains of his wax-candle as an offering to the altar of that church where his penance is concluded.

[F.] Moreover, the Ecclesiastical Court, in the name of the canonical obedience due by them to the bishop, and under threat of punishment for neglect of this mandate, called upon each of the above-mentioned priests,

(xvii) to attend at the market-place or churchyard which was within his own special jurisdiction, each duly attired in surplice and stole,¹ and having a rod in his hand, on the days appointed;

(xviii) to carry out the order of John Leek, the bishop's Commissary, by summoning the two Lollards to stand forth to undergo penance according to the form already set forth;

(xix) to follow them as they walked round market-place and churchyard;

(xx) and to beat and discipline them (with the rod) at each corner of the market-place or churchyard, proclaiming, publicly and in the vulgar tongue, the cause of this penance.²

[G.] Further, the four clerics are required to certify carefully, in English (?), in writing and under seal, what each of them did in this matter on each day of the penance and how the two Lollards bore themselves in doing it.

[H.] This mandate was issued, under the Bishop's seal ad causas, at Buckden manor, in Huntingdonshire, 27 May, 1457, in the bishop's fifth year from his consecration.

[Abbreviated English rendering.]

(i) On 27 June, 1457, in the fifth year of the consecration of John Chedworth, bishop of Lincoln, and in the prebendal church of Buckden in Huntingdonshire, in the diocese of Lincoln, (ii) William Sparke (and his wife) of Somersham, Huntingdonshire, and Richard Sparke (William's brother), appeared.

¹ These two words are a mis-transcription. Words like 'tunc et ibidem' (= then and there) are needed.

² The meaning is clear enough from the preceding record, but a line seems missing from the transcript, to the effect here supplied within brackets.

(iii) When questioned by the bishop about the Articles preferred against them, they admitted that these set forth the tenets that they had maintained;

(iv) but they, then and there, abjured these and all other heretical tenets,
(v) and read aloud their abjurations in the mother tongue.

(vi) Thereupon, the bishop assigned them soul-saving penance (as on pp. 100, 101),

(vii) and directed certain priests (as on p. 99) to call upon William Sparke and Richard Sparke to do penance, as ordered them:

(viii) Witnesses on this occasion were—

Thomas Leger,¹ bishop of Limerick, and suffragan to John, bishop of Lincoln;

Richard Halle, Doctor of Decrees;²

William Wytham, Doctor of Laws;³

Thomas Estyngton and Edmund Shiref, Masters of Arts;

John Rudyng, Bachelor of Laws;

Thomas Michell, Bachelor of Decrees, and perpetual Vicar of Buckden;

John Bugg, John Tyssington, and Laurence Bartelott, notaries public by licence of the Pope and the emperor;⁴ and many others.

[Note as to Penances imposed by the Ecclesiastical Courts.]

The severity, and unnecessarily humiliating features, of the punishments imposed in the Ecclesiastical Courts continued right on into Elizabeth's reign, or even later. From the official minute-books of the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, I give some hitherto unpublished notices of these 'penances', which both illustrate the system and show how each individual penance differed at the discretion of the presiding judge. The conjunction of open penance in both market and church continued a long time, but was gradually replaced by open penance in church only.

15 December, 1569, a young woman of High Ongar, Essex, was sentenced by the Archdeacon of Essex to appeare at Chelmsford to do open penaunce in the markt, in a sheet, and ther to confesse her offense penitently, and on Sunday after to do the lyke in Ongar church.

² 'of Decrees,' i.e. of Canon Law.

³ 'of Laws,' i.e. of Civil Law.

⁴ The usual formula descriptive of notaryship, when written in full.

16 December, 1590, a young woman of Bradwell-on-Sea, Essex, was ordered—vpon Satterdaye nexte to come into Malden towne, where she shal be placed openly vpon some scaffold, abowte xi. of the clocke in the forenoone of the same daye, and shall there stand vntill one of the clock in the afternoone of the same daye, in a white sheete, and a white wand in her hand; and the next Sunday following she shall come into the church of Bradwell, at the beginninge of the first lesson for morning praier, attired in a whyt sheet, and shall there in penitent manner continewe vntyll the service and sermon be ended.

On 17 June, 1591, a parishioner of Burnham-on-Crouch, Essex, received this sentence in the Archdeacon of Essex's Court:

He shall vpon the next Saboth, or vpon Sundaye come sevenighte, at the beginninge of morninge praier, come into the church of Burnham, apparrelled in a white sheete, and white wand in his hande, and there shal be placed in some conveniente place, neare the minister and in sighte of the congregation there assembled, and so stande vntill such tyme as the minister in the tyme of sermon (or of readinge of an homilie) shall call for him, and then [he] shall confesse and acknowledge that, whereas he hath byn called before the judge of this corte for suspicion of evil life, and by denieing therof hath had the benefytt of law to purge¹ him selfe (if he so cold²), wherein he hath fayld, and is therefore founde by lawe and pronounced for guiltye of the fact, he doth therefore acknowledg that he hath greuously offended the maiestie of God in his wicked life and adulterous lyvinge; for which his most wicked and adulterous life, he shall aske mercy at the hands of almighty God and desire him in his mercy to pardon him his former ill life, and desire the congregation presente also to forgyve him, and to pray with him that he may be forgyven his wickednes at God's hands; and promise amendment of his former wickednes; and shall then say some praier after the minister, at the minister's discretion.

12 December, 1592, in the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex held in Ingatestone Church, a parishioner of Downham, Essex, had this sentence:

On Sundaie next he shall come to Downham Churche at the last peale to servyce, and there stand in a white sheete at the church porche till the second lesson be redd, and then shall goe into the Church, and there stand and penitently confesse his fault and offence.

It was certified in a Court, held 19 January, 1592³, that this penance had been performed.

This humiliating form of public penance became still more degraded when people of substance could purchase exemption from it. It is one of the many indications of the great poverty of Elizabeth's reign that Ecclesiastical Judges are found readily assenting to 'commutation' of penance. Even where the Archdeacon did not feel authorized to allow such commutation, an appeal to the Bishop was generally successful in obtaining it. The following examples are all authentic, being taken from the official minute-books of the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, and are, I think, fairly representative of this unpleasant feature of English social life. Wealthy people could buy commutation; poor people continued to be exposed to open shame.

13 December, 1569, the Archdeacon of Essex sentenced a parishioner of Leyton, Essex, to penance:

viz. that he should stande in Romford markett, the next markett daye, more penitentie, all the markett tyme, in a whyte sheate, and a rod in his hande, and in his parish church of Leyton, in the same way, on the Sunday following, and ther shall acknowledg his offens penitently.

But, on appeal of the man so sentenced, backed by entreaty of some of his neighbours, he was excused penance, on condition of giving 10s. each to three poor scholars of Cambridge, and 10s. towards the repair-fund of Leyton church.

29 February, 159 $\frac{1}{2}$, a parishioner of Romford, who had been ordered public penance in Romford Chapel, on a Sunday, in the time of Morning Prayer, brought a petition in his favour signed by some parishioners, and was allowed to substitute semi-private penance before the minister and some parishioners selected by the minister, on condition of putting 20s. into the hands of the minister to be distributed by him among the poor of Romford liberty.

31 March, 1596, William Tabor, Archdeacon of Essex, who had ordered public penance to two persons, received a letter, dated 4 March, 159 $\frac{5}{8}$, in which Richard Fletcher, bishop of London, in consideration of money paid to him 'to be employed in godly uses', discharged both parties from obligation to do penance, and ordered all proceedings against them in the Ecclesiastical Courts to cease. -

XII: Proceedings, taken 1457, against Thomas Hull of Hertford, for practising the Black Art.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, apparently from leaf 14 or ff. 14 bk., but presumably not the whole record.

The belief in the power of 'necromancers' (adepts in the 'black art') to invoke evil spirits, and compel them to discover buried treasure, and render like services, continued so late that the practice became not only a favourite theme of the raconteur and novelist (see John Aubrey's Brief Lives, under Thomas Allen, i. 27, and John Dee, i. 213, and Sir Walter Scott's Waverley, ch. xiii), but an anathema of the Statute-books (both English, viz. 1563, 5 Eliz. cap. 16; and Scottish, see Sir Walter Scott's Waverley, chap. lxvii).

Charges of witchcraft, as being against the Canon Law, were constantly brought before the Ecclesiastical Courts. I give here a number of later authentic instances of such charges, taken from the official minute-books of the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex. They serve to illustrate this old Hertfordshire case, as mentioned in this set of papers; and also to indicate the wide range of this popular belief.

12 July, 1591, in the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, held in West Ham Church, two widows of Woodford, Essex, were cited to answer charges of witchcraft. In both cases, since the charge is preferred by one person, it was probably brought in by a man who believed himself to have been bewitched.

Widow May, of Woodford, accused: she hath of long tyme byne suspected for a wiche, and nowe of late suspected by William Foxe.

Widow Coppres, of Woodford, accused: she hath of long time been suspected for a wiche, and nowe of late by John Poole.

In many cases recourse was had to the reputed wizard, in the belief that he could by his skill detect a thief:

3 February, 159 $\frac{1}{2}$, in a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex held in Romford Chapel, John Munday, of Loughton, Essex, appeared, on a charge made by the Churchwardens there, that he 'went to a connyng man to learne of goods that were stolen or gon.' The case was dismissed.

16 June, 1595, in a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, held in Romford Chapel, the churchwardens of Barking, in Essex, complained that — Carter, of that parish, is generally reported to be a cunning man, 'and dothe take monye of diuerse to helpe theim to things lost and stolen, viz. of one for 2 clokes stolen, (of another) for a ring lost.'

Another common reason of resort to conjurers, was to obtain their help to force spirits to reveal the position of buried treasure. There was an entertaining instance of this at Beeleigh Abbey, near Maldon, Essex, in 1591: see Essex Review, xvi. 68.

Frequently the supposed wizard, or cunning man, was consulted about illness, human or of cattle.

2 May, 1592, in a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex held in Romford Chapel, John Grave, junior, of Romford, was delated by the churchwardens there that he 'doth goe and seeke after witchery.' Accused said that his wife, without his consent, 'did goe to father Perfoche, to learne of him some medycyne for some cattell that he had sick, but he knoweth not that father Perfoche is a witche; and his wife (as he verely beleveth) did neuer thinke him to be a witche, and went not to him desirouse to obtaine any helpe for his cattell by any suche meanes.'

Grave was solemnly admonished against having recourse to sorcery; and was dismissed the Court on payment of 2s. Court-fees.

In the same Court, on the same day, on the same charge, proceedings were instituted against William Moushowe, of Romford, with the same result.

To repel a charge of this sort, the accused person, if allowed by the Court, might produce written testimony of good character.

2 May, 1592, in a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, held in Romford Chapel, Alice, wife of William Foster of Barking, suspected by common fame to be a witche, brought a certificate of her innocency under the hands of the Churchwardens there. The case was dismissed, but the accused had to pay the Court-fee (12*d.*) and the apparitor's fee (4*d.*), as well as the expenses of the journey to Romford.

3 May, 1592, in a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, held in Ingatestone Church, it was reported that one Whaple of Fobbing did make complaint against Joan Bell, of Fobbing, of suspicion of wutchcraft. She appeared in Court, and 'vtterly denieth' the suspicion to be true. She was ordered to bring to a later Court a certificate from 'fower of her honest neighbors' that she is reputed to be an honest woman and not at all thought to be a witch.

On 2 June, 1592, she brought into Court a certificate from honest women of Fobbing that she lay under no suspicion of witchcraft.

In other cases the Court refused to allow an accused person to clear himself, except by the cumbrous and expensive process of compurgation. A deed was drawn out, to be publicly read, on a Sunday, in the church of the parish where the offence was alleged to have been committed, announcing that at a Court to be held at a given place and on a given day, the accused person proposed to purge himself of the charge by taking oath of innocence, and inviting all who objected to such purgation to attend the Court and give evidence against the accused. The accused then attended the appointed Court, bringing with him his compurgators (in number four, six, eight, or other number, as had been fixed by the Court), and exhibiting his parish-priest's certificate that the 'Intimacion' had been duly read. Objectors were then invited to appear, and, if any attended, were heard, and the case adjourned. If no objection was made, the accused person took oath openly that he was innocent of the charge, and each of the compurgators took oath that he believed that the accused person had sworn the truth. Compurgators for men had to be men of good repute, of the same (or neighbouring) parish as the accused; for women, honest women, of the same (or neighbouring) parish; for clerics, beneficed clergy of neighbouring parishes. On the strength of these oaths, the accused was acquitted, and granted a certificate to prevent any future proceedings on the same charge. The fees were considerable: 2s. 6d. for the Intimacio; 4d. for each oath taken; 13s. 4d. for the certificate; and, in addition, the usual fees to the Court and to the Apparitors. Besides, the accused no doubt had to defray the day's expenses of those who appeared as compurgators.

5 May, 1592. In a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, held in All Saints Church, Maldon, Margaret Wiseman (wife of John Wiseman of Maulden) was delated by the Churchwardens, for that she is suspected by common fame of wythcrafte. She claimed and was allowed purgation. 5 July, 1592, she appeared in Court with her Compurgatrices (Judith wife of John Cowrtmol, Margaret wife of Thomas Carter, Agnes wife of George Warner, Agnes wife of Robert Brierly, Agnes wife of Richard Flude, and Elizabeth wife of John Pratt—all of Maldon). Margaret Wiseman then took oath that she is 'altogether guyltless of the facte of witchcrafte and also of all occation of suspicion of witchcrafte'. Her six compurgatrices then took oath that Margaret Wiseman hath sworn a just and true oath, and that she 'hath not geven any cause of suspicion of witchcrafte'. Her purgation was then admitted, and the testimonial of its acceptance was signed; but the Judge of the Court solemnly admonished her to be most careful in future to give no cause, in any way, for like suspicion.

XVI: Confession of Richard Pyckard, followed by his formal expulsion from the list of Notaries public entitled to practise in the Consistory Court of Lincoln Diocese.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 47. The story is not very clearly told in the Register, but this seems to be the substance of it. Two chief offences had been brought home to the culprit. First, he had accepted bribes to foist Robert Cade, priest, into the perpetual curacy of Aylesby (near Grimsby, Lincolnshire). The Bishop of Lincoln presented to the rectory of Aylesby 24 March, 1448 (Alnwick's Register, fol. 97), but the church was soon afterwards appropriated to Lincoln Minster. The date of the proceedings is uncertain, since the documents in the Register are out of order, the one before Pyckard's case is 1458, but the one before that is 1557. The one after Pyckard's case is 1564. So far as I can make out, bishop John Chedworth had claimed the right of presentation to the curacy on this occasion for himself, on some technical ground. The bishop had then caused his mandate for the institution of his nominee to be made out, and committed it to this notary (Richard Pyckard) for transmission to 'Master' Alexander, who was possibly acting as deputy of the Archdeacon of Lincoln. Richard Pyckard, thereupon broke open the sealed envelope ('pyxys'), removed the bishop's real mandate, and substituted for it (probably by erasure of the name in it and substitution of Robert Cade's name) a faked mandate, which deceived 'Master' Alexander, and procured the institution of Robert Cade to the benefice. Secondly, in some transactions, Richard Pyckard had represented himself to be a much-trusted local attorney, by name Roger Jordan, and, under cloak of that name, had executed fraudulent deeds, possibly in connexion with the advowson dispute.

The Ecclesiastical Court, which dealt with the case, under presidency of William Wytham, LL.D. (Archdeacon of Stow, 1458-72, but acting in his capacity as chancellor, and Commissary of the bishop), Richard Hall (Official principal of the bishop of Lincoln), and Richard Dyklun (President of the Consistory Court of Lincoln), met in St. Mary's church, Stamford.

guilty man, in St. Michael's church, Stamford, was divested of coat, shoes, and stockings, and led bareheaded, and barefooted, clad only breeches and shirt, from that church to appear before his judges in St. Mary's church.

[I. English Text of public confession of guilt on the first charge.]

* I Richard Pyckard, be fore al this pepull here assembeled, openly confesse and knowlege that I haue falsly forged letteres by the which I haue falsly deceyued my lord Iohn, by the grace of god Bisshop of lincoln; And, by fals Symonye and wynnnyng of the valour of xx li. that I haue receyued, I haue vntreuly put Sir Robert Cade, prest, in possession of the benefice of Aylesby perteynyng to the Collacion of my said lord of lincoln, agayn the trew order of lawe, and agayne the wylle and thentent of my said lord of lincoln: for the which I crye god mercy, and aske my said lord forgyfnesse.

Confessio Ricardi Pykard.

Richard Pyckard admits forging a deed (by which he deceived John Chedworth, bishop of Lincoln), having accepted a bribe of £20 to get Robert Cade made incumbent of Aylesby, Lincolnshire.

[II. Latin Record of Proceedings connected with this Public Confession.]

Hanc confessionem in Ecclesia parochiali beate Marie ville stamford (coram Magistris willhelmo Wytham, legum doctore, & Ricardo halle, Officiali lincolniensi, Ricardo Dyklun, presidente Curie Consistorij lincolniensis ac Aldermanno dicte ville, Willhelmo Broune, Thoma Gregory, Magistris willhelmo Rath, willhelmo Goodyere, & nonnullis alijs) idem Ricardus Pyckard braccis & camisia tantum indutus, & coram huiusmodi venerabilibus viris, ab ecclesia parochiali sancti Michaelis Stamford vsque eandem ecclesiam beate Marie incedens, more penitentis, publice perlegit, vna cum hac clausula—

This confession was made in St. Mary's, Stamford, before the Ecclesiastical Judges then seated, by the penitent, led there, bareheaded, barefoot, and coatless, from St. Michael's church.

[III. English Text of public confession of guilt on the second charge.]

Richard Pyckard admits posing, with intent to cheat men, as a well-known notary named Roger Jordan.

Also I haue falsly feyned my selff to be a notary and called my selff Roger Iordan, the which is knowen for a notary (where that my name is Richard Pycarde) to thentent for to deceue men of theire goodes agayn the lawe & good conscience.

[IV. Latin Text of decision of the Court.]

The Court deprived Richard Pyckard of his privilege of practising as a proctor in the Consistory Court of Lincoln.

Et confessione huiusmodi per dictum Ricardum Pyckard 5 perlecta, idem Magister Ricardus halle (Officialis antedictus), tam de mandato domini lincolniensis Episcopi, quam vigore et auctoritate Officij sui huiusmodi, ipsum Ricardum pyckard ab officio & dignitate officij procuratoris generalis dicte Curie consistorij, qua prius fungebatur, priuauit et degradauit: presenti- 10 bus ibidem, Magistro Willelmo Wytham, Johanne Boterwyk, Johanne Hare, et Tyssington¹, et aliis.

[V. Latin² Record of the bribes received.]

To induce him to this unlawful act, Richard Pyckard received (a) a bond of £20 from William Rydding, Idem Ricardus coram Magistro Thoma legier, willhelmo witham, & bug; tyssington,³ & laurencio [Norrys], confessus fuit quod recepit obligacionem xxli. a Willhelmo Ryddyng 15 commoranti cum Nevport de Ryby,⁴ ad effectum quod dominum Robertum Cade in beneficio de Aylesby faceret intitulari, et habuit xxj. quarteria brasii et oues, ad valorem illius summe, & retradidit⁵ ei obligacionem.

(b) a bond of £40 from Robert Cade.

XIX: Affray, 1468, in the churchyard of Grantham, Lincolnshire, with proceedings thereon.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 91. The date is apparently the last days of December, 1468. The greater part of the narrative is in Latin, of which only a summary is here given. For this summary I am responsible.

Ordinary cases of breach of peace and assault were dealt with, in most parishes, by the leet-courts of the several manors, and, in most municipalities, by the borough magistrates. But, if the altercation took place in a church or a churchyard, the case passed out of the jurisdiction of any civil court, and came before the Ecclesiastical Court, generally that of the Archdeacon. Too frequently these cases were trivial matters that could have been smoothed over without legal procedure, except for the apparitor's³ keen search for fees. To illustrate this Grantham case, from later years, I give a few (hitherto unpublished) notices of such cases, from the official minute-books of the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex.

15 July, 1591, in a Court of the Archdeacon of Essex held in Prittlewell church, Thomas Peerse, of All Saints, Maldon, was indicted, at the instance of the Churchwardens there, because he 'brake the pease and made a blood-shedd vpon Ralph tiler in the church of All Sainctes in the time of the sermon'.

Peerse brought a certificate from Robert Palmer, vicar of All Saints, Maldon, that 'there was a lewde and vngratious boye that, in the tyme of the sermon, did disturbe the people; and Thomas Peerse, sytting neare him, did gyve him a stroke vpon the cheeke, after which the boye was quiett'.

Thomas Peerse offered 'to make faithe that he did not strike the boye anie other wise, nor in other manner, nor vpon anie other intente'.

³ Clark's Shirburn Ballads (1907),

² Note 3, p. 119.

Peerse was sentenced to pay 8*d.* to the poor, and excommunicated until further order.

15 January, 1594, in the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex held at Romford, Richard Fynson of Loughton appeared to answer a charge of striking John Monday in Loughton churchyard on Sept. 26, 1591. He admitted that 'in gest and sport and not upon any collar or anger, he did tripp vpp his heeles, as he was sytting vpon the Church rayles'. He was ordered to confess publicly, before the minister and the congregation, 'that he hath vnorderly behaued himselfe', and to pay 12*d.* to the poor of the parish.

3 June, 1592, in his Court held at Great Baddow, the Archdeacon of Essex had before him five parishioners of South Hanningfield, Essex, on a charge of scolding and brawling in the churchyard there. Henry Sowche admitted that he had used some words of strife (being moved thereto), but now they are agreed and all things are quiet, and no contention restethe amongst his neighbors. For his offence, he was ordered to make public apology in South Hanningfield Church. William Bennet's wife admitted having 'used some words of strife, and vnkynde words, towards some of her neighbors'. She escaped on payment merely of the Court-fee (12*d.*). Widow Holland was discharged, without paying fee, being very poor.

12 May, 1595, in the Court of the Archdeacon of Colchester, held in Saffron Walden church, Essex, John Waylett of Ugley, Essex, was proceeded against because he said to Robert Meade, church-clerk, in service-tyme in the churchyard that 'he was a pickthanck Knave to say that his boy (John Waylett) dyd wrastle in the churchyard in the tyme of diuine service at morning prayer'. Waylett admitted calling Meade 'knave' in the churchyard, but pleaded that Meade 'urged hym therto, brawling with hym in the churchyard'. On this confession, in terms of the statute, Waylett was excommunicated.

[I. English Summary of Latin Narrative.]

There had been a conflict in the churchyard of the town of Grantham, between Thomas Wortley, Corvyser, and Edward Singer, a minister of that church. It was presumed that the churchyard had thereby been polluted, and the matter was referred to the Vicar (Richard Dawe) and John Tyssington, 5 acting as Commissaries for the bishop. This Commission took the sworn evidence of Thomas Wortley himself, of Sir Thomas Wynneway and Sir William lempster (priests), and of William lempster and William Welbourne (ministers of the church). They found that Wortley had struck Singer violently with a 10 stick, who shed blood from his nose in no small quantity, in the churchyard. The Commissaries further declared that the churchyard had thereby been polluted, and excommunicated Wortley. On January 31, 1468, Wortley confessed his deed before John Chedworth, the bishop, in the house of Henry Curteys of Grantham; and took oath on the gospels to do penance as would be ordered him. The Bishop appointed Master John Goule, bachelor in the decrees, to absolve Wortley

 5 from the excommunication which he had incurred. The penance was that Wortley should go with bare shins (tibiis) and feet at the time of the reconciliation of the churchyard by the bishop, and, humbly and in penitent wise, minister holy water, at the bishop's nod, to the bishop in the 'reconciliation' cere-
 10 mony. On Purification (2 February), i. e. on the second day after this verdict, Wortley was also, clad only in shirt and breeches, and carrying in one hand a wax taper and in the other a pair of beads, to walk humbly at the head of the procession which was to take place on that Feast, to kneel down
 15 at the four corners of the churchyard or of the church (according as the weather allowed the procession to be in the open air or not), and to be disciplined by the rod by the curate who was in charge of the procession. After the procession was over, at the time of High Mass, Wortley was to be waiting in the baptistery, engaged in private prayer, and, when the offertory of 20 the Mass was made, was to place his taper in the hands of the celebrant. Like penance was to be made on Sundays, February 7 and 14, at the time of the procession on those days. Further, on Saturdays, February 6, 13, 20, and 27, at the hour when 25 the market was fullest of people, Wortley, attired as a penitent, and with wax taper and beads, accompanied by the curate (in surplice and stole, and carrying a rod), was to walk round Grantham market-place, and at each of the four corners to submit himself to correction. On each of the four Saturdays, after the penance 30 was done, the curate was to make public declaration, in English, of the cause why it had been imposed. The formula to be used by the curate is as follows:

[II. Full English Text of the Recital made by the Curate at the times when this Penance was done.]

All Cristen people here assembled and gadred shall vnderstand that Thomas Wortley, here present, doth this his penaunce
 35 Inioyned him by the Reuerend fadir in god Iohn, by the grace of god bisshop of lincoln, for this cause: ffor asmoche as the said

Thomas Wortley in the nyght tyme smote violently oon Edward Syngar, a minister of the Church of grantham, and drew blod of him within the Churcheyerd of grantham; Wherby the said Churcheyerd was polluted and of administracion of all sacramentes and sacramentalles suspendid, to the grete displeasure of 5 god, contempt to oure moder holy Church, and grete noyanse and offense to all this pariche; by occasion wheroff he stode accursed. And sithen full penitently cam byfore my said lord of lincoln & his ministirs iudicially sitting, and there confessed playnely his said defaute and trespasse, and submitted him vnto 10 my said lordis correccion; for which trespasse, he hathe in parte satisfied his penaunce, and is in will to performe the residew of the same. [III. Summary of Latin statement of further Penance.]

In addition, the Bishop enjoined Thomas Wortley that on all the vigils¹ of the Blessed Virgin, for seven years following, he was to have only bread and water, beginning these fasts on the vigil of the Purification (1468); and warned him peremptorily that he must continue to perform this penance, unless sufficiently dispensed, on pain of the Greater Excommunication.

XX: Petition, 1464, by the Cistercian Abbey of Bruern, in the county and archdeaconry of Oxford, to King Edward IV, to have again the impropriated rectory of Wootton, near Woodstock, formerly granted them by King Henry VI, but afterwards resumed by the Crown.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 240. The long reign of Henry VI (1 September, 1422, to 4 March, 1461) had been very fruitful both in benefactions to older secular colleges and religious houses, and in new foundations for educational or religious purposes. The recognition by Parliament of Edward IV on 4 March, 1461, followed by the Yorkist triumph at Towton, 29 March, 1461, threatened the very existence of all recent foundations, and the impoverishment of many older foundations, e.g. Eton College, and several colleges in ¹ There were eight such Vigils in July 1, Aug. 14, Sept. 7, Nov. 20, each year, viz. Feb. 1, March 24, Dec. 7, Dec. 31.

Oxford¹ and Cambridge, as well as monasteries. The Crown lawyers of the new sovereign seemed to be resolved to show in the law-courts the like mercy to grants made by Henry VI (now designated 'king of England de facto but not de iure') as his troops had shown in the field in their savage slaughter of the vanquished Lancastrians. The present petition is a representative of many hundreds of the sort which were sent up to Edward IV in these first years of deadly fear. It is not for a moment to be supposed that these details came within the King's personal supervision or added anything to the revenues of the Crown: they were processes which brought considerable fees to the law-officers of the Crown, and abundant payments to their underlings for transcription, sealing, and registration.

On 2 Aug. 1440, Henry VI, by grant under Privy Seal, gave to Bruerne Abbey the patronage of Wootton Church, with licence to impropriate it, but reserving £8 yearly to the Exchequer. The Pope and the Bishop of Lincoln would not allow the impropriation, and, on 18 June, 1445, Henry VI forgave the arrears of the £8 charge, and cancelled future payments, until the impropriation had taken effect.

The petition is prefixed to an Institution to Wootton, 18 Aug., 1464, on presentation by Edward IV.

Bruerne Abbey, very poor but most hospitable, and prayerful, had a grant from Henry VI of the rectory of Wootton, on terms of a yearly payment of £8 to the Exchequer.

The Crown afterwards resumed the rectory, and it is still in the king's hands.

² This clause intimates that, in terms of the compact made by religious houses, &c., with their benefactors (Godstow English Register, E.E.T.S., 1913, pp. 182/10, 206/25), Edward IV is admitted to share in all the 'meritorious works' of Bru-erne Abbey. On 27 March, 1519, Lincoln College, Oxford (Vetus Collegii Registrum, fol. 30), in bargaining with John Penny, bishop of Carlisle (died 1520), offered him 'a full share in all spiritual good deeds done, God allowing them, in All Saints and St. Michael's churches in Oxford and in the College chapel, by the then members of the College, [Abbreviated English version of grant, as proposed.]

The King, to all to whom these letters patent may come, sends greeting.

We, of our special favour, grant to John, abbot of Bruerne, in Oxfordshire, and his abbey, the advowson of Wootton parish church, near Woodstock, in Oxfordshire, which is of our patronage, for ever, to be held of the Crown by the abbey in pure alms. We give leave to the abbey to impropriate the church, and to hold the impropriation to its own uses, i. e. to increase its revenue and thereby make fuller provision for divine services in the abbey. The abbey is to pray for our welfare during our life, and for our soul's health after our death, and for the souls of our ancestors and predecessors. This grant is to override the Statute of Mortmain.

XL.: Agreement, 1534, between the rector of Syresham, Northamptonshire, and Biddlesden Abbey in Buckinghamshire as to tithes of certain lands in Syresham parish.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 264, lf. 264 bk., and lf. 265.

The explanation of the enrolment of this agreement is most aptly given in a charter, dated Monday before All Saints' day (29 October), 1274, found among Westminster Chapter Muniments, and brought to my notice by Dr. W. Warde Fowler.

The Priory of Hurley, Berkshire, agreed to allow, in consideration of the payment of 10s. half-yearly, the Rectory of Kingham, Oxfordshire, quiet possession of certain tithes which the Priory used to collect in that parish. But the Priory made this agreement conditional on the rector's obtaining, at his own costs, both from the Bishop, and from the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln, a full ratification of the agreement so as to ensure its due observance in future. Clearly, in this Syresham case, Biddlesden Abbey must have followed the same course.

A second stipulation made by Hurley Priory was even more drastic, and is most suggestive of the multitudinous trouble incident to collection of tithe. This stipulation was that (by the authority of the Bishop and Chapter) the rector of Kingham and his successors should bind themselves to allow the Archdeacon of Oxford (or his Official), if they had omitted to pay this ten shillings in any year, to compel them, by excommunication in the Archdeacon's Ecclesiastical Court, on mere production of this agreement, to pay this tithe-rent-charge, with any arrears that had arisen, and all expenses incurred in connexion with the case; and should expressly renounce all right of appeal to any other law-court.

fforasmoche as Controversy, varyance, and debate hath been mouvd, steryd, and dependyng betwext vs, the foresayd Richard, Abbott, and covent of the monastery of Bittilsden before named in the countie of buckingham on the oon partie, And Arthur Lowe, person of Syrysham above named in the countie of Northampton in the other partie, as well of and for right, title, and perception of tithes commyng and renewyng and that hath come and bene percevyd within the sayd peryshe of Sirisham vpon xij. yerdes of Launde called mary Launde, and vpon certeyne other landes called stockyng close, stockyng leese, stable yeates, westorne hill, tyle house Lande, and the tythe * of A mede called dole mede (parcell, as it is said, of the sayd xij. yerdes of Lande named mary Lande), as for other causes and maters dependant and incidente to this premisses, for thappesing of all and singuler wiche varyance, contention, and debate, we, either the sayd parties, by medyation of owre ffryndes, for thauoydyng of expenses, labours, and charges in this behalf, and for A fynall determynacion and perpetuall peace to be hade, haue, by ovr bothe consentes and assent, conuentyd and agreed in like manour and fforme as hereafter dothe ffolowe.

Inprimis, the sayd Abbott and covent, and there successours, from hensforthe pesable, ffrelve, and quyetly, withoute contradiction or interruption of the sayd Arthur or his successours or eny man in there right or title, shall enioye, perceve, and take all and singuler tithes of Corne, haye, wulle, and lambe, commyng, growyng, and renewyng of and vpon xij. yerdes of Lande called mary lande, and vpon asmoche of the medowe called dole mede as apperteynyth to the xij. yerdes of lande called mary lande (that is to say, the one half of the sayd medowe, the oon yere; & the other half, the other yere; and so forthe frome yere to yere), as the sayd Abbott and covent be wonte to haue, take and perceue; and also, all maner tithes commyng and renewyng of and vpon A close called stockyng close, stockyng leese, westurne hill, and stable yeattes, Whether the said groundes be in the occupacion of the said Abbott and covent or there and of 'Dole mead', in Syresham parish, Northamptonshire, was referred to arbitrators.

Biddlesden Abbey is to have the tithes of the 'Maryland' 12 virgates, and of the Maryland share of 'Dole mead';

as also the tithes of 'Stocking close', 'Stocking leese', 'Western hill', and 'Stable yeattes'.

successours, or in the occupacion of eny other ther seruantes for the tyme beyng.¹

But the Abbey is to have the tithes of 'Tile-house land' only when that land is in the Abbey's own occupation.

And the sayd abbott and covente, and ther successours, to perceyve take and enioye for evermore allmaner of tithes commyng, growyng, or renewyng of and vpon certeyne londes called 5 tylehouse lande, when and as often as the said Abbott and covent or there successours shall kepe the sayd landes, or eny parte therof, in ther owne handes; And when and as often as the said tyle house landes, or eny parte therof, shalbe lett to eny tenaunte or tenduntes, then and as ofte the sayd person 10 and his successours to enioye the tithes commyng, growyng, or renewyng of and vpon asmoche of the said tyle house landes as shalbe so lett to farme for euermore.

The Abbey is to have the tithes of 'Stocking leese', as above said,

Item, it is agreed that the said abbott and covent, and there successours, shall, in like manour as is before rehersed, ffor 15 euermore enioye, perseve, and take all and singuler tithes of corne, hay, wull, and Lambe, Callfe, and mylke, and allmaner other tithes, predyall or myxt, growyng, commyng, or in eny maner of wise renewyng vpon stockyng lese, or falling there at eny tyme, as well when the said grounde called stockyng lese 20 is or shalbe in the occupacion of the said Abbott and covent or of ther successoures, or in the occupacion of eny there tenaunte or tenauntes there for the tyme beyng, withoute contradiccion or interrupcion of the said Arthur or his successours or eny man pretending ther right or title for euermore. 25

and also fees paid by cattle grazing there

Item, that the sayd Abbott and covent and there successours & there ffirmors or Tenauntes of the said stockyng lese shall, at there pleasure at all tymes, take the Ingistementes² in the said stocking lese [of] eny bestes of the parischners of Sirisham, or of eny other persons of whens so euer they be, as ofte and 30 when they will, for euermore ffrom hensforthe, and that the sayd Abbott and covent and there successours for euermore shall enioye all and allmaner of tithes³ ffalling, chaunsyng, or reclaimed tithes of Biddlesden lands in his parish on the ground that they were not worked by the Abbey itself, but were let to a tenant-farmer.

² Or 'agistments': p. 132.

³ Such tithes included a tithe or commutation-money (a) for each newyng in þe sayd stockyng lese, to be percevyd aswell of straungers cattelles as of the parishners of Sirisham, with-owt contradiction or interruption of the sayd Arthur [or] of eny his successours or eny person or persons pretending his or ther 5 right or tittle there.

Item, it is agreed betwixt the forsaid parties that the above named Arthur and his successours in the churche of Sirisham foreuermore* shall buylde, repayre, and mayntayne the parsonage and the Chaunsell of the sayd Sirysham and all thinges therto 10 belongyng as he is wonte to do.

And also fu[r]thermore, that the sayd person, and his succes-sours frome tyme to tyme for euermore, shall susteyne and bere all proxis¹ and Sinodalles, all dismes and all subsidies,² and all and singuler other Charges, aswell ordynary as extraordinary, 15 what so euer they be or shalbe hereafter, to be payd owt of the sayd churche of Sirisham.

Item, it is furdre agreed, for the advoydyng of striffe, not onlye of the foresayd parties but also there successours for euer, that this present composition shalbe confirmed, aswell by the 20 consente of thabbott and covent of Leicester, patrons of the sayd chirche of Sirisham, as by auctorite of the bisshope of Lincoln ordynary of the same; And that, whan so ever the forsayd Abbott and covent of bittilsden, or eny man in there name, shall procure the sayd confirmacion, the foressaid Arthur 25 shall, at all convenyent tyme, be redy, present (by hym selfe or his sufficiente proctour), and agrey to all these premisses, with oute contradiction.

In wytnes of all and singuler the premisses, we, either of animal grazing there; (b) for the milk of cows pastured there; (c) for cheeses made of the milk obtained from this pasture; (d) for lambs, calves, and foals born there.

¹ 'procurations' is meant. Procurations and synodals were fees paid by the incumbent of a parish church to the Archdeacon. 'Procurations' represented commutation-money to purchase exemption from liability to entertain the Archdeacon and his train at any time during his progress through the country. 'Synodals' represented a share of the money required to defray the expenses of the Archdeacon's Visitations at Easter and Michaelmas. A Visitation was called Synodus, because the clergy were required to attend personally.

² 'Dimes' and 'subsides' were taxes, raised by rate on church property, after they had been granted to the king by vote of Convocation.

The Rector of Syresham is to keep in repair the Rectory-house and the Chancel of Syresham.

The Rector is to pay all dues payable by his church.

This agreement is to be confirmed by the patron of Syresham church, and by the diocesan.

the sayd parties (aswell of thabbott and covent of bittilsden, and the foresayd Arthur, person of the church of Sirisham), hath putt here-vnto owre seales.

XLVI: Orders, 1535, by John Longland, bishop of Lincoln, for the publication throughout the diocese of Lincoln of Henry VIII's repudiation of the Pope's Supremacy in the Church of England.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 260 bk. and lf. 261.

A 'locus exemptus' was a parish, or religious house, which was not subject to the ordinary jurisdictions of the Bishop of the Diocese and the Archdeacon of the Archdeaconry in which it lay, but was under the jurisdiction of an external authority. Thus, in Essex, certain parishes were not subject to the Bishop of London (the diocesan), or to the Archdeacon of Essex (or Colchester), but to the Archbishop of Canterbury; others, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. Such places were also called 'Peculiars'. Occasionally, in virtue of special orders issued by the Crown or the Primate, the Diocesan assumed authority, for some definite purpose, over these loci exempti, or 'Peculiars', and so here.

[I. Directions contained in bishop John Longland's covering letter.]

19 June, 1535, * John Longland, bishop of Lincoln, calls upon all clergy of whatever status under his jurisdiction, to publish, in all the churches of his diocese, Henry VIII's pronouncement against the Pope.

* Iohannes, permissione diuina Lincolniensis Episcopus, Vniuersis et singulis Abbatibus, Prioribus, Decanis, Prepositis, Gardianis, Rectoribus, Vicariis, Capellanis, Curatis, et alijs 10 quibuscunque Ecclesiasticis personis, vbilibet intra Diocesim et Iurisdiccione nostras existentibus, declaratio expulsionis vsurpate iurisdiccione episcopi Romani. tam in locis exemptis quam non exemptis, Salutem gratiam et benedictionem.

XLIX: Two letters, 1535, 1536, addressed by John Longland, bishop of Lincoln, to the Archdeacons of his diocese, in connexion with Henry VIII's orders as to Preachers and as to Bidding-Prayers.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf, 266 bk. By a singular oversight the dates of both letters are omitted. No copy of the Orders referred to is contained in the Register, but their import may be gathered from the letters themselves, as well as from the summary given in Froude's History.

The first letter contains an odd bit of indirect evidence as to the slowness with which even those in authority recognized the usefulness of the printer's art. Although it was clearly of importance that every cleric should know exactly the terms of the Orders he was called upon to observe, no printed copy of these Orders was distributed, but individual clerics were invited to write out each a copy for himself. In 153 $\frac{6}{7}$ (No. LV) printed copies of the King's Orders were provided for distribution.

The Orders issued as to preachers were intended to prevent pulpit handling of the controversy as to the supremacy of the King or of the Pope over the Church of England. To that end, preachers were forbidden to handle controversial topics in their sermons, and to confine themselves to exhortations to fear God and honour the King. This was the precedent followed¹ by Laud and Charles I, 1630 and onwards, in respect of the fierce controversy then waged as to predestination, when they forbade preachers to discuss the burning question of the hour. In both instances, authority was defied. Preachers and congregations were too keenly interested in the forbidden topic to leave off discussing it.

Further, no cleric was to presume to preach unless he had had a licence to preach granted him by his Bishop or Archdeacon. Care would, of course, be taken to refuse a licence to any cleric who was notoriously opposed to the King's claims.

Because of the general contempt shown to these Orders, in his second letter, a year later in date, the bishop ordered the provision, and due keeping, of a register of preachers in every church, with a note of the subject touched on in each sermon. Following up this idea, the Archdeacons, till quite recent years, at their every Visitation, were very urgent with the Churchwardens of each parish to provide 'a Book of Strange Preachers' and see that entries were duly made in it.

Each sermon was at this time preceded by the Bidding-prayer, so called because in it the preacher asked the congregation to pray¹ for the persons, or the souls of persons departed, whom he specially commended to them. The terms of this prayer were left very much to the preacher himself, as he might feel himself directed by the statutes of the College to which he belonged or of the Chantry which he served. No doubt, preachers, up till now, had been in the habit of beginning their bidding-prayer with the words, 'Ye shall pray for the holy father, the pope'; and this was now forbidden. The bidding-prayer is still in use in Oxford before University Sermons in St. Mary's Church and City Sermons in the church of All Saints and St. Martin's, but in both cases the prayer now follows a printed form.

In the Register, on lf. 267, immediately after the two letters, two inhibitions are enrolled, one addressed to John Vyall, Warden of the Friars Minors of Bedford, the other to Edmund Philipps, rector of Maulden, Bedfordshire, cancelling their licences to preach and forbidding them to preach; dated, Old Temple, London, 11 March, 1535[$\frac{5}{6}$].

L: Lease, 153⁵/₆, of the estate at Cropredy, Oxfordshire, belonging to the prebend of Cropredy in Lincoln Minster.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 283 to lf. 284 bk. The provisions as to security are exceptionally precise. The special proviso as to the place of payment attests the insecurity of the roads, then infested by footpads and mounted highwaymen. The landlord avoids the risk of being robbed of the rent in its conveyance to his house from the place where the estate is, and imposes on the tenant the liability for its safe carriage.

LI: Lease, 1536, of St. John Baptist Hospital, Mere, Lincolnshire.

The Hospital not being legally a body corporate, the Warden for the time being could grant no lease which would be binding on his successor; and, therefore, in order to effect a valid lease for years, he had to call in, exactly as a prebendary had, the dominating authority of the bishop. The stipulations as to re-modelling of the buildings deserve special attention. So also those as to legal proceedings to be taken to repel encroachments on the estate.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 272, lf. 272 bk., lf. 273.

Mere hospital (an extra-parochial place) was founded at Dunston (south-east of Lincoln city) by Simon de Roppele before A. D. 1246. The Master-ship was in the gift of the bishop of Lincoln, or, if the see were vacant, of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. After the Reformation, the property was settled on Lincoln Grammar School.—Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 766; Victoria County History (Lincolnshire), ii. 233.

LII. Lease, 1536, of the estates of the prebend of Carlton Kyme (otherwise called the prebend of Carlton cum Dalby) in Lincoln Minster.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, lf. 282 bk., and lf. 283. This lease brings into prominence an especially bad feature of all impropriated parishes where no provision had been made for a permanent vicar. The impropriator, whose only interests were to get as large a rent as he could, and to spare himself trouble as to his statutable church liabilities, made his bargain with his tenant that the tenant should be wholly responsible to the archdeacon and bishop for supply of the cure. Inasmuch as the lessee was, in most cases, the principal man in the place, there was little opening for criticism or complaint on the part of the parish.

LV: Henry VIII's Decree, 153⁶/₇, abolishing several Festival Days.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 275 bk. and lf. 276.

The trouble about Holy-days was not that there were several of them in each month in the Church Calendar, and that the bells rang for service on these days, morning and evening; but that attendance at such Holy-day services was compulsory on all parishioners, and non-attendance was punishable at the discretion of the Ecclesiastical Courts. Consequently, work on these days, however urgent in the interest of the farm, was contrary to Canon Law, and punishable.

To show the working of the system, I give some examples, from authentic and unpublished records of Elizabeth's reign, preserved in the official minute-books of the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex. It is to be remembered that, in all such cases of prosecution for working on Holy-days, the odium and the severity of the proceedings went far beyond the actual fine imposed, or the actual apology ordered. There were—

(a) the Court fees: at least 4*d.* to the apparitor for serving the citation, and at least 12*d.* to the Court for hearing the case; and, often, like fees for recording the performance of the order made by the Court, so as to have a formal conclusion of the case;

(b) the day taken up to attend the Court, which, generally, was held at some centre a long way from the accused man's abode; and the expenses incurred in the journey;

(c) the disgrace of being herded, on a mere charge of doing work or taking part in athletics, with a crowd of parish offenders, brought into court because of gross offences against decency and morality.

7 November, 1586, a young man of Romford was brought into the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex on the charge of 'plaieinge at stoole-bawle on holie Thursdaie last in service tyme, and gave crewell wordes to the churchwardens for demaunding 12*d.* of him for his absence from church'. He admitted that he had been at stool-ball that afternoon, but asserted that he had been at Evening Prayer. He was sentenced to pay 12*d.* to the poor; and (of course) had to pay court and apparitor's fees.

5 May, 1592, Richard Jeffercy, of Asheldham, Essex, was brought before the Court of the Archdeacon of Essex, on the charge that he 'had procured company together, and plaied at foote-ball' in Hackwell, Essex, on Easter Monday, in Evening Service time. He pleaded that he 'did not knowe that there was at Hackwell any evening prayer' on that day. He was ordered to pay 4*d.* to the poor of Asheldham.

8 May, 1591, Richard Jeppe, of Chignall Mary and James, Essex, was charged before the Archdeacon of Essex, with having carted and carried hay on our Lady Day¹ last. He admitted that, on that day, 'a boye of his did fetch home a lyttle haye with his carte and horse.' He was ordered :

On Sunday nexte, immediately after the seconde lesson is red at eveninge praiser, to come into the bodye of the churche, and, before the minister, to acknowledge his falte, and shew himselfe sorie for that his seruante did breake the queen's law, and promise that there shall not be the like falte committed againe.

On 15 June, 1591, this Richard Jeppe paid 4*d.* to an apparitor of the court, to have his certificate of having duly made apology (as ordered) put on record.

14 September, 1591, Thomas Sorrell, of Woodham Ferrers, Essex, attended the Court held in Ingatestone Church, to answer the charge that he 'went to ploughe vpon Bartholomew daye'¹ last in the forenoone'. He was ordered to pay 2*s.* to the use of the poor.

Before Henry VIII's decree, the burden of Holy-days was especially grievous, because several of these fell within the busy weeks of harvest, when, in view of the scarcity of food (each harvest being barely sufficient for the needs of the country), and of the uncertainty of the weather, every effort ought to have been made on favourable days to get the grain safely into barn. So far as Henry VIII's Order in Council dealt with this national trouble, it is most laudable. It is even to be regretted that a like measure of relief was not extended to the equally important, and equally weather-troubled, season of haymaking, if not also to ploughing and sowing in years when the weather hampered these works.

If such reasonable relief had been given in these respects, there would have been no need for the abolition of certain distinctive local Festival-days, as by this Order in Council was ruthlessly enjoined.

Every parish had its own two local Holy-days; (i) the day of the patron-saint² to which the church was dedicated; (ii) the day of the dedication of the church.

This second festival probably perpetuated, by unwritten but

² These documents seem to put again on record the patron-saints of several churches, the exact dedications of which had been forgotten.

continuous tradition, the actual day of the dedication of the building, as originally consecrated. As a result of Henry VIII's Order the dedication-day of most churches is now irrecoverable.

Two examples of the two parish festival-days may be given :

At All Saints, Oxford, the patronal-day was, of course, November 1, All Saints day ; but it is on record that the dedication-day of the church was November 18. At St. Michael's North Gate, Oxford, the patronal-day was September 29 (St. Michael and All Angels), but the dedication-day of the church was October 16, a later St. Michael festival (St. Michael in monte tumba).

The Order in Council appointed (infra, p. 218) four days, one at the end of each quarter, to be 'the foure generall offering dayes'. I hazard the opinion that this was done to reduce to uniformity the practice of different churches in keeping their yearly masses in commemoration of their founders and benefactors.

My information about these comes from the Bursars' Accounts in the Archives of Lincoln College, Oxford.

At All Saints Church, Oxford, this mass was said once a year, generally about the end of January, but apparently on a day chosen at random each year. The churchwardens, I assume, paid the charges out of the moneys they had in hand.

1514 [end of November], recept. in anniversario benefactorum Omnium Sanctorum, 5*d.*

1525 [late in January], in anniversario benefactorum ecclesie, 1*d.* ; pro compositione luminis in anniversario benefactorum ecclesie, 12*d.*

At St. Michael's, Oxford, this mass was said once a quarter, but, apparently, not on fixed days. The charges for it were generally 3*d.*, viz. 1*d.* for the offering at Mass, and 2*d.* for the use of the wax-tapers. It is referred to in the College accounts under a great variety of names.

1505 [once in each of the four quarters], in obitu pro ecclesia, 1*d.*; pro cera, 2*d.*

1508, in communi obitu, 3*d.* [about 27 February, 14 May, 23 July, 3 December].

1510 [about 21 January], for the town dyrg, 2*d.*; [about 17 June] pro compositione exequiarum communium, 3*d.*

1512, in exequiis communibus, pro cera et oblatione, 3*d.* [about 28 February, . . . 1 August, 28 November].

1513 [about 19 June], for the quarter deryge, 3*d.*

1517 [about 25 January], pro conductione cere benefactorum, 3*d.*; [about 21 June], pro obitu benefactorum ecclesie, 3*d.*; [about 9 August], pro obitu benefactorum ecclesie, 3*d.*; [middle of December], pro obitu benefactorum ecclesie, . . .

Henry VIII, Supreme Head (on earth) of the Church of England, orders John Longland, bishop of Lincoln, to send a printed copy of enclosed Order in Council to every church in his diocese, to be there publicly proclaimed, under pain and penalty, in the fullest assembly of people possible at every place. Dated at Westminster, 16 February, 28 Henr. VIII (1536/7).

² 'Pexsall' is surname of the Clerk of the Privy Council who was responsible for sending out this Order. The clerk's name is thus habitually attached to such Orders, no doubt with a view to checking any Order of which the authenticity was disputed.

fforasmoeche as the nombre of holydayes is so excessyuelly growen, and yet dayly more and more by mens 'devocion', (yee, rather, 'supersticion') was like further to increse, that the same was (and shuld¹ be) not only preiudicyall to the commune weale by reason that itt is occasion as well of moche slouthe and ydelnes (the very nourishe of thieves, vagabundes, & of dyuers other vnthriftynes and inconvenyences) as of decaye of good mysteres & artes (vtile and necessary for the commune weale), and loosse of mans foode (many tymes beyng clene destroyde throught the superstitiousse observance of the said holydayes in not taken²
 the oportunitie of good and serene wether offred vpon the same in tyme of haruest): but also pernytyouse to the soules of many men, whiche, beyng intysed by the lycentiousse vacacion & libertie of those holydayes, doo vpon the same commonlye vse and practize more excesse, ryote & superfluyte than vpon any other dayes; And, sith the sabbote day was ordeyned butt for man's vse, and therefore ought to give place to the necessarye and behove of the same whan so euer that shall occure, moche moche (sic) rather any other holyday institute by man: It is therefore, by the kynges highnes auctorite, as supreme hedde on erthe of the churche of England, with the commune assent and consent of the prelates and clergie of this his realme in convocacion laufully assembled and congregate, (emonges other thinges) decreed ordeyned and establisshed ffirst, that the feast of Dedycacion of the churche shall in all places throught-oute this realme be celebrate and kept on the ffirst sonday of the moneth of octobre for euer, and vpon no other day.

Item, that the feaste of the patrone of euery churche within this realme (called comunly the churche holyday) shall not ffrom hensforthe be kept or observed as a holyday, as heretofore hath bene vsed, butt that it shalbe lafull to all and singuler

¹ Notice the ancient (correct) use of the future-perfect subjunctive (or conjunctive) of the auxiliary verb 'shall'. 'Shuld' here, in our present diction, = 'might'.

² Note the dropping of the 'g' element in 'taking'. It has dialectical significance.

The present excessive, and increasing, number of 'holy-days', due to superstition, is prejudicial to the nation, materially,

and spiritu-ally,

and derogatory to the Sabbath-day, which alone is divinely appointed.

Therefore, Henry VIII, with consent of the Convocation of the Church, orders—

(i) that every church in the realm shall observe 1st Su. in Oct. as its 'Dedication' Day.
 (ii) that parishioners may work on their 'Church holy-day,' i.e. the anniversary of the special patron-saint of their parish-church, unless that be a general church holy-day.

Holy-days in harvest (here defined to be 1 July to 29 September), and in the Law-terms of the Westminster courts (unless they be holy-days of greater importance), are no longer to be observed.

But all clerics may say their service on those days, only they must not make a great show of doing so, nor force the laity to join them in their observance.

Four quarterly days fixed by law, as 'offering-days'.

Beginning and ending of Law-terms fixed by law.

persons resident or dwelling within this realme to go to there worke occupacion or mysterye, And the same truely to exercise and occupye vpon the said ffeaste, as vpon any workie day, Except the said ffeaste of churche holyday be suche as must be els vniuersally obserued as a holyday by this ordynance 5 folowyng.

Also, that all those ffeastes or holydayes whiche shall happen to fall or occurre ether in the harvest tyme (whiche is to be counted ffrom the first day of Iulie vnto the xxixth day of Septembre), or els in the terme tyme att westmynstre, shall 10 not be kept or observed from hensforthe as holydayes, butt that itt may be lafull for euery man to go to his worke or occupacion vpon the same, as vpon eny oþer workye day (Except alwayes the feastes of thappostelles, of oure * blessyd lady and of sayncte george, And also suche feastes as wherin the kynges 15 iudges att westmynster hall do not vse¹ to sitt in Iugment, All whiche shalbe kept holy and solempne of euery man, as in tyme past haue been accustomed).

Provided allways that itt may be lafull to all prestes and Clerkes, aswell seculer as Regular, in the fforssaid holydayes 20 nowe abrogate, to syngē or say there accustomed service for those holydayes in there churches, So that they doo nott the same solempnly, nor do ringe to the same after the maner vsed in highe holydayes, ne doo commaunde or indicte² the same to be kept or observed as holydayes. 25

ffynally, the ffeastes of the Natyuyte of oure lorde, of Easter, of the Natyuyte of saynte Iohn the baptist, and of saincte Michaell tharchangell, shalbe from hensforthe counted, accepted, and taken for the ffoure generall offering Dayes.

LVI: Dispute, 153 $\frac{7}{8}$ (?), as to right of common in common-ground called Brent, between the duchy of Clarence tenants in Uppingham manor and the bishop of Lincoln's tenants in Lyddington manor, Rutlandshire.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 279 bk. The year is not given, but is probably 153 $\frac{7}{8}$.

The attribution of these letters, by the copyist who enrolled them in Bishop Longland's Register, is at first sight puzzling; but is readily explained by his having put down 'duke of Clarence' for the 'duchy of Clarence office'. The facts are sufficiently stated in James Wright's History and Antiquities of . . . Rutland (1684), pp. 130, 131. Uppingham manor belonged to Anne Beauchamp, sister and heiress (1449) of Henry, 15th earl and 1st duke of Warwick, and wife of Richard Nevil, 17th earl of Warwick. After her husband's death on Barnet field, 1471, Uppingham (with other of her estates) was settled on her elder daughter Isabel, wife of George, Duke of Clarence (brother of Edward IV). After the attainder of 'false perjured Clarence' in January 147 $\frac{7}{8}$, his estates were forfeited to the Crown, and were retained by the Crown till Elizabeth's reign. The Crown managed them by a Steward. In 1484 the Stewardship of the lordship of Uppingham, and of other lordships and lands which formerly had belonged to George, Duke of Clarence, was granted to Simon Digby (afterwards Sir Simon, of Coles Hill, co. Leicester), who died 27 February, 151 $\frac{9}{20}$. In 1546 the manor of Uppingham was temporarily granted by Edward VI to his sister Elizabeth (afterwards Queen), the rents being then collected by Richard Darrington, the King's Receiver in Rutland.

LIX: Lease, 14 March, 1538, by Lincoln College, Oxford, of the revenues of All Saints Vicarage, Oxford, to the Churchwardens of All Saints parish.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 285 bk. to lf. 286 bk. The transaction required the assent of the Bishop of Lincoln, as being both Visitor of the College and Diocesan of the parish.

See in the Forewords, p. 22, supra. The special proviso that the parish-priest appointed by the parishioners shall minister to all residents in Lincoln College was required by the fact that some rooms in the College were within the bounds of St. Michael's parish, so that, except for this proviso, the All Saints parish-priest might have judged them outside his cure.

The fact that one penny was an accustomed and usual offering at a mass is shown on many occasions in Lincoln College documents. It will be enough to cite one special instance, and to refer to the general instances of the church-obits at All Saints, Oxford, and St. Michael's, Oxford (supra, p. 215 and p. 216).

On 30 June, 6 Henry VIII (1514), Lincoln College agreed with Sir William Finderne, knight, of Childrey, Berks., to keep a yearly obit at Childrey, at which the College should give to the rector of Childrey (if present) 8*d.*; for wax-light, 4*d.*; pro oblatione, 1*d.*; and to the parish-clerk for tolling the great bell at the mass and the exequies, 4*d.*

The College and Parish mutually agree to execute all legal deeds which may be thought necessary to make this agreement valid and binding on both parties.

Special bargain is made that members of and inmates of the College (a) shall be exempt from payment of ordinary dues to the Vicar of All Saints;

¹ Statutably the College consisted of the endowed Foundation Members (Rector and Fellows) and the Statutable Servants (cook, manciple, barber, bible-clerk), but there were also resident in it Graduate Commoners, who paid for their board and residence, and Poor Scholars (i.e. lads who earned their board and instruction by service within the college).

(b) shall have right of burial in the parish chancel of the Church, or in the Churchyard, without paying for the ground, and free of all charges except the usual burial fees to the vicar, clerk, and bell-ringer, actual costs of funeral lights, and the Mass-penny.

Bargain is specially made that the parish shall provide for itself a priest to serve the cure, (subject to the statutable right of the Rector of Lincoln College to admit him and dismiss him at pleasure), and to act as ministrant priest to all the inmates of the College.

Special stipulations are made

And also shall have free buryall and funeralles within their chauncell¹ (the whiche is on the sowthe syde of the saide chirche) and within the chircheyarde for the saide rector, fealowes, scolers and their successours and for all other inhabytauntes that be nowe within the saide colledge or hereafter 5: shalbe duringe the saide terme withoute any maner of paymentes, chardgies, exaccions, or any other dueties susteyninge for the same, excepte dueties to the parishe priste and clerke, and for rynginge of the belles, burninge of tapurs, wexe, and other dueties perteyninge to the clerke of the chirche and to 10 the parishe priste, and the offeringe of the masse peny^e ² whenne any of the saide colledge shall fortune to dye.

LX : Will, 1540, of Richard Newcome, yeoman, of Toynton St Peter's, near, Spilsby, Lincolnshire.

From the Lincoln Consistory Court Book (1541), lf. 164 to lf. 165 bk.

This will, like John Asserby's Inventory (supra, p. 134), is from the records of the Lincoln Consistory Court. There is no apparent reason why Dr. Furnivall should have chosen this particular will out of the dozens of similar wills in that set of records. They are being edited by Canon C. W. Foster, F.S.A., and the volume which contains the wills prior to 1528 is nearly ready.

LXIII: Lease, 1544, of the prebend of Stoke, near Newark-on-Trent, with its members in the shires of Nottingham and Lincoln.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda at Lincoln, lf. 229 bk. to lf. 230 bk.

The lands and churches which endowed this prebend in Lincoln Minster lie to the east and south-east of Newark-on-Trent, and partly in Nottinghamshire and partly in Lincolnshire. Their dispersed character suggest particular inquiry as to the conditions which prevailed when this prebend was so endowed. It is possible that, to account for them, we may have to go back to a time when the uncertain activities of Trent made it doubtful what lands were in Notts. and what lands in Lincs. Compare the shifting of the shire-line between Oxon., and Berks, south of Oxford, due to the change of its main stream by the Thames: Wood's City of Oxford i. 415.

APPENDIX: ADDITIONAL DOCUMENTS

Canon Foster has rendered the E.E.T.S. the very great service of furnishing exact transcripts of five interesting documents, which are also of great value to this volume because they supplement the information contained in the documents formerly transcribed for the Society. Inasmuch as all five fall within the limits of Dr. F. J. Furnivall's period, and are of equal importance with those noted by him for transcription, I conclude that their omission by him was an oversight. It is, therefore, with great pleasure, that I am enabled to give the text of them here.

Canon Foster also tells me that at the end of bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda there are copies of five indentures of the same type as those included in this volume, viz.:

Lease for 40 years of a pasture in the parish of Leighton, Huntingdonshire, belonging to the prebend of Leighton Bromeswold, dated 7 August, 34 Henry VIII (1542): bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, lf. 308 bk.

Lease for 40 years of the parsonage of Farendon and Balderton, excepting the presentations to the vicarages of those two places, dated 20 April, 34 Henry VIII (1543): bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, lf. 307, 308, 308 bk.

Lease for 31 years of the rectory of Mumby in the parts of Lyndesey, Lincolnshire, excepting the advowson of the vicarage there, dated 10 January, 36 Henry VIII (1544½): bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, lf. 303 bk. and 304.

Lease for 21 years of that portion of the prebend of Dunham, Lincolnshire, which is called 'the canon landes and tuythes', &c., in the parish of Hougham, Lincolnshire, dated 20 January, 36 Henry VIII (1544½): bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, lf. 302 bk. and 303.

Lease for 35 years of the prebend of Langford Ecclesia, Oxfordshire, excepting the advowson of the vicarage there, dated 12 May, 37 Henry VIII (1545): bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, lf. 304 and 304 bk.

There are many similar leases in English enrolled in the Acts of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln from 1520 downwards, and probably some of even earlier date.

From the space which these occupy in the Register, it is unlikely that they were accidentally overlooked by Dr. Furnivall when he went through that volume. I conclude, therefore, that he intentionally passed them over, either because their inclusion would have meant too many documents of the later date, or because their subject-matter was, in his judgement, adequately represented in the documents he had already noted for transcription. If either supposition is correct, I have done right in excluding these from the present volume.

Bishop Longland's Register is divided into two portions: (i) Institutions to benefices, which do not concern us here, and (ii) Memoranda, records of proceedings of general interest, from which all the documents here contained (for his episcopate) have been taken. The Register has recently been re-folioed, and, by the thoughtful kindness of Canon Foster, F.S.A., the new and permanent references have been substituted for the haphazard folios found at the time when the transcript was made.

Appendix I: Vow of celibacy, circa 1452, by Agnes Baldwyn, widow.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 7. The formal Latin record of the vow, which would have given the date, seems absent. The date is about 1452. The vow was taken before a bishop acting as deputy for the diocesan. This bishop was Thomas Salscot, bishop of Enaghdon (or Annaghdon) in Ireland, suffragan of Lincoln, 1449, and of Exeter, 1458 (Stubbs, Registrum Sacrum, edit. 2, p. 209).

Appendix II: Vow of celibacy, 1454, by Isabel Maryon, widow.

From bishop John Chedworth's Register at Lincoln, lf. 18 bk. and lf. 19. The Latin text is of interest as stating distinctly the official dress (veil and cloak) of these votresses: see supra, p. 20.

Appendix III: Will, 1531, of William Rayne, of Cottesbrook, Northamptonshire.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, at Lincoln, lf. 227 bk. and lf. 228. This will is of interest as showing that a priest, in charge of intercessory services, was sometimes lodged and boarded in the house of the person who had left money for these services. This possibly explains the residence of a priest in dame Joan Buckland's household (supra, pp. 39, 40); he may have been hired by her to do intercessory services for her deceased husband.

Appendix IV: Persecution of Protestants, Paris, 1535.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, at Lincoln, lf. 258 bk., 259, 259 bk. The preceding document is dated at Lincoln, 13 May, 1535; the document following is dated at Wooburn 24 May, 1535. Inasmuch as in this part of the Register the documents follow each other very closely in order of date, the receipt of the letter by the Bishop must be about the middle of May 1535.

The persecution of 'heretics' in France here mentioned, the scattering about in the streets of Paris of pamphlets deriding the doctrine of Transubstantiation, the great expiatory procession in Paris, the king's fierce speech against 'heretics', and the public burning of several 'heretics', are all set out in the larger histories of France. It is, however, something new to find a vivid description of these incidents from the pen of an English eyewitness. It is more minute and exact, apparently, than the French record cited by Sismondi. A quaint touch is added by the haste of the letter-carrier to be off which prevented the writer from fair-copying his letter.

The chief persons mentioned are—King François I, his consort Eleanor of Austria, his eldest son (Francis the Dauphin, born 1517, and now eighteen years old, died 10 Aug. 1536), his second son Henri (born 1519, and now sixteen years old, succeeded as Henri II in 1547), his third son Charles (d. 1545), the two princesses (Madeleine, afterwards consort of James V of Scotland, and Margaret, afterwards Duchess of Savoy), Jean de Guise, of Lorraine, born 1498, Cardinal since 1518, Jean du Bellay, bishop of Paris.

It is recorded that the Ambassadors of foreign powers, then present at the French Court, were spectators of the procession. Bishop John Longland's correspondent may well have been someone of importance in the English ambassador's suite. It is interesting that the letter should be in English, and good English, and not in Latin. Two or three odd things are found in it, e.g. (i) the use of the French semblablement instead of the English semblably, suggestive of a person resident in France and constantly speaking French; (ii) the phonetic spelling of le Châtelet, suggestive of a foreigner, unfamiliar with the spelling of the names of Parisian buildings. The Swiss would be of interest to English readers because Henry VIII had in 1521 asked the Cantons for leave to enlist Swiss in his service. The Ste. Geneviève procession is described in a letter of la Marquise de Sévigné.

Appendix V: 1535, Proceedings against Ralph Clerke, of Princes Risborough, Buckinghamshire, for speaking against Transubstantiation.

From bishop John Longland's Register of Memoranda, at Lincoln, lf. 267. Henry VIII's keen personal interest in the great dogmatic controversy of the age, combined with his tyrannical temper, spurred him on to extreme measures against all critics of the doctrine of Transubstantiation. All such were heretics, felons, rebels, to be dealt with without mercy or remorse. The statute against heretics, here referred to, was passed in 1534 (25 Henr. VIII, cap. 14).

The proceedings here instituted belong to the king's court. Possibly the copying of this writ into the Episcopal Register is to be explained by the contumely directed by this sartorial controversialist upon the bishop and his sermon.

1535. Inquiry is to be made by the king's officers into the case of Ralph Clerke. It is said that, after hearing a sermon by the Bishop of Lincoln, John Longland, on 18 Nov. 1535, preached at Little Missenden, Buckinghamshire, in which Transubstantiation was affirmed, and after which the Bishop asked the people to pray for him, Appendix IX: 1500, Commission issued by William Smith, bishop of Lincoln, directing the Abbot of Peterborough (however indignant at receiving this charge) to convey criminous clerics from Peterborough to Banbury or Newark-on-Trent.

From bishop William Smith's Register at Lincoln, lf. 87 and 87 bk.

The proceedings were, probably, in pursuance of the 1485 Statute (supra, p. 255). The Bishop's Vicar-general, 26 Nov., 1499, wrote to the Abbot, announcing the Bishop's intention to lay this duty upon him. In spite of the Abbot's openly expressed indignation at being called upon to discharge such an unworthy service, the Commission was issued about a month later, viz. on 5 January, 1499.

[I. Abbreviated English version of the Official Record of the issue of the Commission.]

* Commission to receive convicted clerics within the Liberty of Peterborough.

The bishop issued a commission to Robert, Abbot of the Benedictine Monastery, Peterborough, empowering him, personally or by deputy, to demand and receive any clerks arrested and indicted on any criminal charge, and committed to gaol within the Liberty of Peterborough, in order to have them dealt with in the Bishop's ecclesiastical court, and to send them to the bishop's castles of Banbury or Newerke, with copies of their indictments. Dated at the bishop's manor of Lyddington, Rutlandshire, 8 January, 1500,¹ and in the fifth year of his translation.

The aforesaid commission had been reluctantly submitted to by the Abbot of Peterborough, as appears by the following letter sent by him to the Bishop's vicar-general in spirituals.

[II. Text of the Abbot of Peterborough's Protest.]

GRAMMAR NOTES

FOR students of English, the documents contained in this volume have several points of interest.

I. They represent, authoritatively, the forms which were in use in one well-defined canton of the country. That canton is a large one, certainly, being a great diocese which stretched from Trent to Thames, but it was possessed of historical unity, having always been under one church administration, the rule of the Bishop of Lincoln. Accordingly, the various uses, in respect of spelling, inflexion, syntax, which prevail here invite comparison with similar documents of the same period which may be forthcoming from other great dioceses, south, west, and north. Such comparison may possibly yield some suggestions as the distribution of dialectical forms over different provinces in England.

II. These documents represent also what may be called natural English in distinction from artificial English. Where a writing is the result of translating a Latin text, it is bound at this period to be trammelled by the original. Here, although the documents, being in the main wills or leases, are of a legal character and therefore deeply influenced by older Law-Latin precedents, they are not actual translations, and, in spite of their formalities, are genuine English as employed in actual life. Similarly, the persons who wrote them, such as the parson who drafted a will, or the attorney who drafted a lease, were men of reasonable education, writing documents of a type they were in the habit of dealing with, and in their mother tongue. Thus, once more, in spite of technicalities, the documents are essentially natural.

III. The documents bring us very near to the originals, and are exceptionally free from mere clerical errors. The wills, leases, &c., here contained were sent into the Bishop's Registry immediately after their execution, and, at once or after very brief delay, transcribed into the Register then in process of compilation. This transcription was no doubt done by one of the clerks of the bishop's legal adviser, and such a clerk would attempt at least professional accuracy in making the transcript and revising it when made. Similarly, the E.E.T.S. copy was taken from the Register by an experienced transcriber; and, in a multitude of doubtful places, the proofs have been rigorously collated with the Registers by the friendly and expert skill of the Rev. Canon C. W. Foster, F.S.A., Secretary and Editor of the Lincoln Record Society. Although, in this text, several forms and words appear strange, they may be taken as exactly setting forth the forms and words of the original writing.

IV. Almost all these documents have the further advantage of possessing exact statements as to the day and place of their being written, so that whatever indications they give of the specially local uses of sounds or words can be trusted to.

V. The documents, in date, fall into two distinct groups.

There is an earlier group (pp. 37-131), 1450-64, which belongs to the later period of what is conveniently called Middle English. Appendix I and Appendix II belong to this group.

Forty-five years later (pp. 131-242) begins a group, 1509-44, which belongs to the beginning of Modern English. In the Appendix (p. 255) the documents of this second group begin in 1485, the arbitrary partition year between it and Middle English.

A second inquiry is thus rendered possible. It has been already (supra, p. 271) suggested that an orderly statement of the linguistic facts of the earlier period may be of use when compared with similar statements from other districts.

It is further possible to compare with those of the earlier period the linguistic facts of the second period, in an attempt to find out the leading lines of change which asserted themselves in the first half-century of Modern English. There is an appreciable amount of change, but not uniformly in the way of progress. The marked increase, for example, in the use of the feeble expletive to do shows a less firm grip of the native verb.

VI. Special interest attaches to the comparison of the grammar features of the earlier documents here contained with those of Godstow English Register (E.E.T.S. 1911) and Oseney English Register (E.E.T.S. 1912). These two monastic translations were undoubtedly made, or in process of being made, about the date of the writing of the concluding portion of the Lincoln Diocese first set. But the two monastic texts, in comparison with the Lincoln Diocese texts are ludicrously and, indeed, inconceivably archaic. The Lincoln Diocese texts are, in most respects, well composed, and use forms not remarkably different from those now in use. They are thus in the strongest contrast to the halting syntax and obsolete forms of the monastic texts. The contrast is that between the clearly expressed and straightforward letter of an educated man and the incoherent letter of an uneducated man who has difficulty in the mere act of writing, and still greater difficulty in setting down his thoughts in writing.

VII. The spelling is, of course, eccentric. English had not yet received any impulse towards uniformity, originating in the standardizing action of the compositors in their 'chapel'. Each writer set down for every word he wrote, in fonetik, and in fonetik which might vary from line to line, such combination of letters, chosen on the spur of the moment, as seemed best to express its sound. Something may, however, be learnt from this arbitrary spelling as to the position of the language at this period. Three points, at least, assert themselves:

(i) Plainly, in respect both of consonants and vowels, different dialectical forms of words were then co-existent, some of which have been kept on in modern English, others of which have been quite rejected by the standard speech, whether spoken or written, and, if they survive at all, survive only in dialect.

(ii) Again, the divergences of pronunciation in respect of words like either, neither, and others, which are still noticeable in the standard language as now spoken, have come down from a stage of the language in which a welter of vowels and diphthongs was one of its most striking features.

(iii) In the third place, there is abundant evidence that the blurred utterance of vowels is of long standing. There could not have been such alternatives as moder, modir, modur, had the final vowel been sounded truly.

In the headings which follow I have tried to bring together the main examples of these things.

Ch and k.

In general the ch forms have established themselves in standard English, k forms being now dialectical.

Church is the main instance. On the one side, we have church 64/12, churche 38/5, chirche 99/7; but, on the other side, kirke 45/7, 47/12, 54/26; kyrk 54/7, kyrke 57/13, kirk 120/2. Church continues; there is no example of kirk later than 1465, 121/10.

Chest is a second example. The ch form prevails, chist 40/25, 41/28, 122/1, 124/17; but kyste occurs 45/6.

Examples in which the k form has prevailed in standard English are:

kerchifs 56/32; cherchiffes 57/1.

kechyn 40/9, 49/12; kichyn 56/28; but chechyn 40 note.

Ch and dj.

There are examples of the thinner sound in certain words. In the later period the thicker sound is emphasized in the spelling by the actual use of d.

Ochecote 38/5, is now Edgecott.

charchid 55/14, but charged 63/5. Then, 1536, chardgied 208/21.

D.

In a number of instances d drops out, yielding a softer combination.

adyse 73/12; auyse 75/25; thavice 261/31.

expounid 57/6 = expounded.

boune 134/24, bound.

On the other hand, from false analogy with real ad- words, d is inserted where it ought not to appear.

advoydede 228/25 (1539).

In a few cases d is found introduced as a final letter where it has no real place. Such forms still abound in rustic speech in many districts.

sermondes (1536) 196/21.

pewtir 40/35.

D and th.

There is an unusual number of words in which double forms occur, one set with the flat d, another set with the aspirated th. Unmistakably, in the earlier period, preference is given to the d forms.

Father. The forms are: fader 58/22, 97/12 and frequently; ffader 58/26, 111/2; fadir 49/31, 127/35; fadre 88/7; fadyr 49/37, 54/1.

These d forms are just as common in the second period. We have fadre 145/29 (1529), 220/20 (1538), ffadre 210/9 (1536).

The th form is not found in these deeds in the earlier period. In 1533 ffather occurs 159/20; in 1534 faper 165/15; in 1540 father 232/5; in 1517 ffeyther 266/19.

Mother. Moder 57/25, 117/14, 128/6; modyr 54/1.

And so also, in the second period, modre 145/29 (1529), 191/12 (1535), 223/1 (1538).

There is no th form in the earlier period; but, in the second period, mother 150/4 (1533), 159/20, and frequently afterwards, e. g. 232/5 (1540); moþer 158/31 (1533), 160/8.

Brother. Forms in d occur both in the earlier and later periods—brodyr 51/15 (1451); brodre 153/23 (1533); 184/10 (1535); bredren 182/1 (1535). But the th forms are distinctly more frequent both in the earlier period—broþer 58/15; brother 58/11; brothir 55/20; brothyr 53/25; and in the second period—brother 151/27; broþer 159/13, 165/11; brethern, 258/12.

Feather. We have fedyr 46/27; federbed 41/11, 62/33; in the second period, fedder bed 264/28; ffedder bed 265/30.

In the first period, fetherbed 40/13, 67/20; ffetherbed 39/16, 40/3; and, in the second period, fetherbed 155/9, 162/21, &c.

Wether. The forms in both periods are generally d: wedirs 42/8; wedyr 51/8; wedres 192/12 (1535). But wethers is found 247/2 (1531).

Further. Examples, all in second period, are—ferder 133/17; furdre 133/2, 147/12, 177/17; ffurdre 218/30; fferther 266/20.

Death. Dede 53/30, 56/4; but deth 120/18; dethe 61/24, 68/17, &c.

In the earlier period, other examples are:

oder 83/30; odyr 50/22, 55/6; but other 82/20; othir 56/12.

a-nodyr 49/32; but a-nother 62/18.

toder 74/1; but tothir 48/23, 55/30.

gadred 127/33.

In the later period, togedre (1486) 258/14; radre 196/22 (1536).

hidertoo 129/18; furdre 252/27.

elther 80/30: apparently = elder, i. e. formerly appointed.

Hundred. We have hunderith 66/7 (1454); hundrith 133/6 (1509), 173/20, 221/22 (1528), &c.; hundreth 200/13 (1536), 207/5, &c.

hundrede 136/19, 222/21.

Oxford. Oxenford 72/8; Oxford 74/32, 117/11; Oxforth 189/16; Oxforthe 211/5.

F and v.

The variation between these two is seen in the forms of the verb to give (infra, p. 313).

Other examples are in the verb to have, e. g. haf 49/9; hafe 48/25; haffe 49/25, &c.; but haue 48/26, and usually.

leffes 67/33; levys 42/22 = leaves (subst.).

life 47/6, liff 73/18; lyff 89/37; but live 57/9, 267/7, 22; lyve 84/17, and (1517) 267/20, (1536) 211/7.

beleve 97/8 = belief.

sauf 257/24; savely 138/10 = safe.

leiffe 204/26; leve 132/27 (= leave, verb).

G and y.

Examples of the fluctuation between the harder and softer forms are found chiefly in the verb to give (infra, p. 313). But there are also—agayn 112/17, agayns 118/25, 265/8, ayenst 130/21, ayenste 237/13 = against. Ayen 211/35 = again.

gh.

The spellings of these documents suggest that the aspirated guttural, the ch of Scots 'dochter', 'loch', &c., still survived in some words in Lincoln dialect, alongside of forms of the same words in which it had fallen out.

Pillow. Pillow 40/20, 67/14, pyllow 39/18, 40/15, 66/25 conform to modern spelling and pronunciation.

But pillough 67/35, pyllough 67/6, pillowgh 67/22, by their archaic spelling suggest an archaic pronunciation.

Plough. Plows 54/9, plomen 55/28 attest the absence of gh, but its presence in sound is indicated by its presence in spelling: plogh 49/10, 55/30, plogh horrs 49/10.

Daughter. Doghter 49/35; doghtyr 50/20; doughter 49/26; dowghter 163/23, 185/12.

ght.

The spellings show that this was felt to be a difficult combination.

boughth 166/29 = bought.

brougth 160/26 = brought.

lygth 133/24, 166/6 = light.

ogth 55/35 = aught.

rigth 167/12; rygth 167/4, 168/3 = right.

H.

The peculiarities of h occupy a good deal of space in these documents.

H omitted at beginning of words:

abet 53/14, habit.

owrys 45/9, hours.

owsald 46/6, but howsald 46/6.

And so, in the second period, ys (1507) 27 bis = his.

thospitall (1536) 203/7.

H omitted in middle of words:

howsald 51/18, but houshold 63/3, 69/4, &c.; howshold 122/15.

scepard 55/31, but schepard 55/27.

wete 42/12, but whete 42/13, 58/2.

the wiche 89/28, but the which 81/24; wich 122/16, but which 121/37.

This occurs frequently in the name Katherine. We have:

Kateryn 45/20, 46/35, 54/22, 89/33; Katerin 119/20; Katheryn 152/25, 160/23, &c.; Katherine 145/30.

H omitted at end of words.

This occurs in the name Elizabeth. We have:

Elizabet 42/32, 50/14, 55/7, 58/4, 89/35; but Elizabeth 49/23, 55/10.

It is especially common with ordinal numbers:

fourte 46/11; fourt 56/1.

sext 64/3, 69/11, 75/28, 89/10; so also king herry vit. 65/3.

An exception appears to be:

fourthe 83/24, and the iiij^{the} 41/35.

In the same way, in the second period, we have:

fyft 154/11.

When Henry VIII is written in full it is:

eight 133/7 (1509), 141/14 (1529), 171/3 (1534); eighte 236/16 (1543), eyght 230/19 (1540); theighte 239/3 (1544).

He is 'eighth' only when he appears in contraction:

viiijth 268/3 (1518), 178/5 (1534), 203/3 (1536), &c.

H inserted at beginning of words:

habundaunt 130/9, 23.

in hall the hast 50/17, but in al the hast 46/5, 54/4.

haws 49/31, awes = owes.

Helys 112/1, Ellis (Elisha).

hilke 54/14, 16, but ilke 54/12.

hordand 49/16, but ordand 48/24.

hus 54/4, us.

So also, in the second period,

hable 147/4, 155/10, 200/10.

H inserted in the middle of words:

qwhere 47/19, but qwer 47/11 = choir.

where 58/36 = were.

And, in the second period,

wholyn 135/18 = woollen.

H in alternative forms:

heires 68/23, 83/5, &c.; hayres 47/10, &c., but eyrys 89/17.

heyrlomes 134/12, but eyrelomys 163/12.

to heyre 232/3, but eyre 184/3.

H in hiatus.

In those combinations in which a vowel preceded a word beginning with h, this h was often sounded so strongly as to prevent hiatus:

a half yer 56/3, 4.

my hors 48/22, 57/16.

my heires 62/3.

my howsald servants 46/6.

a honeste priste 223/5.

In other cases, expedients are used to avoid the hiatus:

an hable preste 147/4.

myne hayres 47/21.

an honeste chambre 229/9 : oon honeste priste 228/20.

L.

The letter l when preceded by a acquires a diphthongal sound. In the earlier period, this was accompanied by the disappearance of the l itself, as it still is in Scots.

Examples are:

Psalter. Sauter 48/9; sautre 54/22; sawter 38/28, 51/10.

Altar. Auter 38/7, 49/8.

This dropping of the l, however, is infrequent in the second period. Auter 164/13 (1534); Awter 265/16, 270/8. Aulter —139/21 (1529), 223/2 (1538)—is the usual spelling. Alter occurs 231/1, 264/25.

Hawberdes 251/29 = halberds.

N.

In certain words n is occasionally let drop.

covent 76/34, &c., is as frequent as convent 74/4, &c.

ngth was felt to be difficult :

lenght 257/28.

R.

The letter r tends to be left out :

Fother 48/20 = further.

embrouded 45/24, but embrowdred 41/9.

performance 266/20.

wosted 41/15, but worsted 40/5.

Sh and sch.

The prevalence of the spelling sch in the earlier period perhaps indicates a greater volume of sibilation, both at the beginning and in the middle of words. But the simpler forms in sh are found throughout the whole of the period, and in great abundance.

schepard 55/27, but shepard 43/32.

schetes 56/35, but shetis 40/23.

worschip 47/11.

The forms parich 51/30, parych 45/7, possibly suggest the domination of the guttural element in the word as spoken.

T.

The letter t occasionally disappears :

Sayn 45/20, 54/22, but saynt 54/21

The letter t is occasionally intruded :

Patent 163/28 = paten.

Th.

There are double forms of certain abstract nouns, one set with the element th, the other set without it.

heale 58/35 ; helth 38/4, 89/23, 90/6, 120/12, 145/25, 151/11, 169/15, 265/36, &c.

wele 261/30 ; welth 134/7, 150/21, 151/10, 170/16, 266/19. Cp. brede (= breadth) 136/11, 257/31.

V.

In Scots v disappears in give and its compounds—e.g. gi'e = give ; forgi'e = forgive. In that singular 1451 deed, which has so many other northern forms, there is possibly an example of this :

'I will my tenauntes y^t aw me rente haf forgyn yer of'
55/37 = (exactly) Scots forgi'en.

V and w.

Considerable fluctuation is found between the explosive v and the liquid w :

Avyse 75/25 ; awisse 47/10 = advice.

Beuerlay 53/23 ; Bewarley 53/21.

oversight 75/11 ; owrsight 47/10.

purvey 77/10 ; purwad 52/24.

travers 49/13 ; trawers 57/5.

valo 48/17 ; walaw 48/16.

veluet 45/21 ; welwet 51/10.

vessell 62/31, 67/34 ; wessell 43/35.

vestementes 48/25 ; westment 45/17 ; westmentes 265/33.

W.

Unless they are all copyist's errors, there are traces of tendencies, in the combination ow,

(i) to reject o, or (ii) to reject w.

We have (i) Wlff 43/4, 23, but Wolfe 43 n. 3.

The use of the 'thorn' symbol continued throughout both periods, sporadically: see especially p. 44.

Some of the later examples of it use are:

pat 151/28 (1528), 185/9 (1535).

oper 206/14 (1536), 218/13 (1537), 226/14 (1539), 241/18 (1544).

Late examples of y are:

thoyer partie (= the oper) (1517) 268/5.

hedgyng and oyer (= oper) menndyng (1518) 269/5.

ys my laste wyll 233/3 (1540) = pis.

wis my wyll 233/7.

In ye name 230/17, and throughout this deed (1540).

wytnessethe yt 230/20, and throughout this deed (1540).

This symbol, in the early period, is used occasionally,

(a) as an initial letter for y:

3erly 47/27.

(b) as a final letter for s, especially of the plural suffix.

thappurtenaunc3 81/19; thappurtenaunc3 121/32.

tenement3 73/15.

Metathesis of r.

This is not infrequent in the earlier period:

byrning 54/31; bryn 54/33.

Croston 73/3, 76/8 = Corston.

girdyll 49/26; gridyll 50/6.

schred 28; scherde 27 = shroud.

thirð 46/11; thred 56/1.

It is found also in the second period: e.g. brent 252/32; threde 266/18.

This is possibly the explanation of such forms as:

matrons 43/2 = ? martens (fur).

onormentes 47/7.

This tendency to metathesis possibly accentuated the tendency to curtail the ending of words in -er when the es of plurality or the ed of past participle was added:

membris 76/12.

ordres 43/11, but orders 43/7.

diapred 41/19.

embrowdred 41/9.

powdred 38/8.

Metathesis of w.

This singular form of spelling occurs in a few documents of the second period:

betewne (1534) 166/27 = between.

dewll 133/16 (1526), and occasionally afterwards down to 185/10 (1535) = dwell.

tewlue 133/20 (1526) = twelve.

It possibly arose in some dialectical difficulty of pronunciation.

A similar difficulty perhaps gave the spelling:

tuythes 225/11, 227/31 for tithes.

Fluctuation of vowel sounds.

A and e.

Among, amonges 40/36, 147/24; emong, emonges, emongest 53/23, 56/30, 150/11, 166/13, 169/32.

 walaw 48/16; valo 48/17.

Soul sometimes appears with a dominant a element, as in Scots; frequently with the dominant o element, as in standard English; occasionally with the diphthong as in English-Irish.

sowle 53/24, 73/33, 117/13, 119/17.

A with m or n.

In certain words where a is followed by m or n it develops a diphthongal sound.

chambir 39/14, 40/2; chaumbir 41/9, 14.

 chaunsell 177/9.
 chauntre 47/13; chauntry 112/1.
 demaundinge 229/4.
 exchaunge 167/19.
 graund 145/29.
 graunte 197/26.
 launde 175/11.
 obseruaunce 121/19.
 remembraunce 137/1.

E and i.

The short vowels e and i (or y) are interchangeable:

betwext 175/4; betwixt 177/6, 220/5; betwyxte 193/14.
 blessed 72/6; blissid 45/14; blyssed 45/3.
 enioye 175/27, 176/4; inioye 173/5, 9, 205/33.
 frenged 43/21; fringed 39/6.
 obetes 47/8; obit 47/29, 77/8.
 other 81/13; othir 47/9.
 prest 158/28; priste 166/18.
 seth 141/1; sith 141/16.
 sex 208/6; sixe 240/16.
 yett 196/25; yit 130/2.

E and o.

Short e and short o are interchanged:

keuer 163/24; couer 162/20.
 longe 41/20, 25; longest 161/19; lenger 41/24, 84/13;
 lengest 154/10.

Long e and long o are interchanged:

yeman 133/16; yoman 124/34.

E and u.

Short e and short u are also interchangeable:

ferder 133/17; furdre 133/2.
 surples 57/13 = surplus.
 successers 47/18; successurs 47/4.

Ew and aw.

ewen 42/1, 3; awe 185/8.

E (long) (or ew) and ow.

meveable and unmoveable 118/10.

ewen 42/1, 3; yow 51/32; yowes 51/9.

you 113/4, 210/9; yow 96/1, 128/15, &c. = 2nd pers. pron.

So also (1507) schrede 27 = shroud.

Intruded i.

In an appreciable number of words an -er syllable has i inserted. This occurs also in -el and -en syllables.

Archier 64/19; Archer 64/4.

chargier 67/35;

maistier 63/1; maister 40/10.

manoire 68/20, 74/9; manoir 74/31, 81/11; manoyer 62/22, 68/27, but usually maner 68/22, 81/15, &c. = manor.

matier 61/23, 25, 112/3, 256/29; maters 97/11, 175/16; matters 196/22.

platier 67/4; plater 43/35, 67/25.

prechier 117/30.

quartier 58/1, 2; quarters 231/18.

tresorier 130/17.

appariell 38/7; apparell 38/10.

qwysshyens 39/14; qwysshens 41/23.

O and u.

o and u are apparently interchangeable:

Bokeland and Buckland 37.

borde 49/10; burde 49/11 = plank.

bot 45/11, 53/22, 26; but 112/11.

costes 211/10; custes 257/24.

hondred 164/7; hundred 170/5.

as moche 69/3, 97/16.

opon 48/3, 50/18, 56/10 = upon 256/29; per opon 45/9;

therupon 39/4, 6.

otherwise 65/4; urtherwise 56/13, 15, 18.

second 163/2, 266/17; secunde 38/16, 17.

sommes 78/33; summes 62/11.

valo 46/25; valu 73/31.

U and e.

Bury, burial are found so spelt, probably as so sounded:

buried 57/25; buried 73/22; buryall 157/5.

But the forms in most frequent use imply the shorter modern pronunciation :

bery 52/5 ; bered 45/14, 54/1 ; beryd 45/5.

bereall 45/11, 52/13 ; beryall 52/9.

Build has a distinct e sound :

Beeldid 76/37, 77/23.

U and i.

busshope 197/1, 220/21 ; bisshop 111/3, 115/4.

churche 64/14, 157/4 ; chirche 97/5, 129/12, 139/20.

ffurst 45/5 ; furst 256/13 ; ffirst 72/5 ; first 38/15.

Ue and ew.

In modern Lincolnshire dialect rule is pronounced rew-l.

Examples of this are possibly found here, viz.—

rewlid 57/20 ; rewle 88/9 ; trewe 97/4, 99/6.

Y and e (long).

In many cases in which the preposition 'by' occurs by itself, or in combination, it is spelt and no doubt was pronounced 'be'.

Be (= by, i. e. by means of) 47/6, 83/20 ; but by 89/36.

Be (= by, i. e. beside) 45/7, 49/2 ; but by 45/11.

before 96/1 ; bifore 99/11 ; byfore 128/8 ; so also before said 89/19 ; bifore said 98/3, 99/15.

behynde 58/30 ; bihynde 269/7.

beseche 90/7 ; biseche 99/15.

betwene 64/20 ; bi twen 257/16.

be witte 58/4 ; by witte 57/24 = bequeath.

beyend 40/25 ; by yend 40 note.

So also :

he (1506) 24 ; hee (1533) 162/15 ; hy 264/25 ; hye 49/11, 164/13 ; high 41/24.

Duplication of vowels.

Vowels are found doubled to give them either a prolonged or a diphthongal sound.

laate 99/7 = late.

maad 97/9 ; maade 191/17 = made.

hool 258/11 = whole.

hoold 97/23 = hold.
 mooste 249/7 = most.
 noon 97/24 = none.
 oon 39/21, 111/4 = one.
 soo 111/10 = so.
 soon 267/23 = son.

Hiatus.

See supra p. 279; and infra p. 289.

Examples of hiatus, in the first period, are :

a apparell 39/3.
 a auter 39/3.
 a encensure 38/6.
 a other 120/20.

And, in the second period :

my awnt 185/14.
 a obligation 202/5.

Crasis.

Examples of hiatus in which the stands before a word beginning with a vowel, are, in the second portion of these documents, the appurtenaunces 166/38, 167/19.
 the intent 168/30.
 the one hedde 237/13.
 the use 140/12, 158/24 ; the uses 144/13.

But the documents, from first to last, show great partiality for crasis, in its written form ; and, by consequence, this must have been, coincidently, in use in the spoken language. In modern English crasis has been conspicuous chiefly in the slurrings needed to adapt the words of metrical psalms¹ to psalm tunes, whether the crasis was indicated by the printer's th' or was left to the vocalist's discretion. In these documents it is a recognized feature of solemn legal documents.

To the first period belong :

thabbot 123/27.
 thapparell 38/14, 78/23.
 thappurtenaunce 73/2, 121/32.

¹ Secular examples are not wanting : Gray's Elegy has in reality 'await alike thinevitable hour'.

thentent 111/5, 116/3.

thoffence 128/14.

More complicated are the duplicate forms in which, after the definite article has merged by crasis into the word following, a superfluous definite article is prefixed.

the thonne 48/23; the thoथyr 48/24; the tothir 48/23.

Apparently to be explained in the same way are:

laumber 51/4 = French l'ambre with the English au sound (supra, p. 284).

athye 47/20 = 'at-they, i. e. that they.

war 54/2 = we are (i. e. we're).

The second period of these documents is even more prolific and bolder in crases than the first. Typical examples are:

thabbott 131/19.

thaduyse 255/9.

thannunciation 171/34.

thappesing 175/17.

tharchangell 171/26.

tharreragies 206/4.

thauoydyng 175/19.

thende 132/25, 198/12.

therbage 269/10; the harbage 269/21.

thintent 197/2, 11.

thoctaves 219/2.

thold 268/12, but the hold 268/14.

thordre 131/20, 249/21.

thother 237/14.

We even find:

thuse 140/14; thuses 143/35.

Somewhat more extreme examples of crasis are:

thospitall (1536) 203/7, where the initial h has been carried off.

tabide 220/21 = to abide.

Transference of consonant from tail of preceding to head of following word.

A special feature [connected with hiatus, and the effort to avoid it in spoken language, has been the removal from the end of a preceding word to the beginning of a word beginning with a vowel, of an intervening consonant.

Examples of the original correct use of words are :

In the earlier period,

myn owne 88/9, 98/4.

And, in the later period,

an other 146/30.

anoper 156/16.

Examples of the transferred letter are :

In the earlier period,

my Naunte 124/27.

a nax 51/33 ; a naxe 49/34.

j. nother 43/1.

my nowne 48/19, 51/32.

In the later period,

a nother 167/5, 237/11.

Personal Pronouns.

The personal pronouns, in every language, are the oldest and most enduring words of all. In English they have retained more than any other words their original character, and therefore there are few notes to be made about them, Middle English uses seldom differing from Modern English uses.

First personal pronoun singular.

Two points only need be noticed :

(i) examples of the dative (a) pure, (b) with a preposition.

(a) the baslard that his fadir withid me 49/30.

(b) to pray for me & (a) do me a messe 53/14.

(ii) a strange 'anacolouthic' construction, 68/13, 'Wite all . . . men . . . me . . . that it is my last wille', which seems to be quite a Thucydidean construction.

'Wite all men' [let all men know] 'me to have made my last will to the effect that.'

The inflected objective case would have made a possible construction, but when it is reached a more modern form is adopted, regardless of grammar.

Second personal pronouns : singular and plural.

There is nothing to be put on record here, except the ow spelling (supra, p. 285), which possibly indicates a difference of pronunciation.

yow (actual plural) 99/15, 128/15.

Third personal pronoun singular : masculine.

Possibly the only noteworthy points are the (a) direct, (b) the indirect dative :

(a) as him semeth best 64/20.

(b) I will he haue . . . as I haue hordand hym 49/16.

Also the use of the simple personal pronoun for the reflexive :

[he] submitted him vnto . . . correccion 128/10 = himself.

Third personal pronoun singular : neuter.

In the earlier period, the archaic form hit is still in regular use :

(a) for nominative case 73/17, 76/30, 112/10 ;

(b) and objective case 50/24, 63/13, 68/19, 73/18, 24, 80/28 ;

(c) and in imperative (3rd person) 130/11.

But, even in this period, the modern form it is usual. A few of the early examples are :

(a) for nominative case 46/4, 5 ; 57/17, 78/5, 122/17.

(b) for objective case 45/10, 12 ; 64/20, 89/17, 122/17.

A peculiarity, in regard of syntax, is that this pronoun is used redundantly :

till thei haue therof CC. marc. to deel hit for my sowle 68/19.

In the second period, hit still continues, e. g. (a) for nominative case 159/22, 161/19 ; also hyt 163/20.

(b) for objective case 157/14, 20 ; 162/5, 165/12 ; also hyt 163/10, 185/17.

In this second period, it is so predominant that except for parallelism, no quotation need be made ; but, for that reason :

(a) nominative, 168/13, 221/20.

From the point of view of strict syntax this pronoun is still found used redundantly or quasi-redundantly: e. g.

All the . . . mony . . . as shall growe . . . I will that hit be orderyd 158/27.

The resydewe of my goodes . . . I wyll hit be deuided 164/14.

The other part I will it shall go 168/13.

The residue of my moveable goodes . . . I will itt be disposed 182/16.

I will that . . . all suche money as I haue . . . bequethed . . . that itt be ordered 182/27.

In each case the meandering character of the sentence, and the inversion of its natural objective case, sufficiently accounts for the redundancy.

The possessive case of this pronoun is still his, there being as yet no its. But it so happens that examples of his (= modern its) are rare in these documents:

My maner . . . with his appertenaunce 68/14, 118/19.
a obligation in his full strenghe 202/9.

Anomalies in the use of it occur, as, e. g., as used with reference to an antecedent plural noun (possibly by attraction of the nearest singular member of a compound phrase):

<I will> all the remenauntz of whete and malt that it be departed 42/13.

Wrytinges whiche every busshope hathe in commaundement to cause itt to be shewed 195/4.

Third personal pronoun plural.

They, them appear in a variety of spellings which leave it doubtful whether the diphthongal sound intended was designed to rhyme with (i) may, or (ii) with might.

In the nominative, there is a distinct a form:

tha, e. g. I will tha have tham 48/3.

tha awe me 53/21.

This appears also as y^a (= pa).

as y^a be gëttyn 53/31.

In the objective, there are also instances of this distinctive a form:

I will tha haue tham 48/3.

yam (= pam) 49/14.

This a appears in various spellings in (i) the nominative of the pronoun :

thay 48/19.

yai (= pai) 48/25, 57/19.

(ii) In the objective case of the pronoun :—

yam (= pam) 47/6, 48/7, 24 ; 53/23.

yame (= pame) 48/23.

thaym 62/20 ; thayme 62/14.

Of this pronoun there are also, in every case, diphthongal forms, with e dominant in the diphthong.

Can it be assumed that ei, ey, in these cases rhymed with ei in 'eiderdown'? or must they be taken to rhyme with ay, in hay, may? In Essex, now, the girl's name 'May' is pronounced with a diphthongal sound lying somewhere between ei and ay, which I cannot myself pronounce, often as I have heard it, or reduce to writing, often as I have tried.

The shorter, simple e forms suggest the former use of this ei vowel where the old spelling is found.

(i) In the nominative case :

they 48/21, 63/13.

thei 41/4, 58/35, 63/9.

Here a more distinctive e sound is given (if the reading is correct) in :

p^e 46/7, and the 267/15.

(ii) In the objective case :

theime 130/10, 19.

theym 58/35, 97/33, 99/4.

Of this pronoun there are, from first to last, in these documents, the e (short) forms which alone are recognized in Modern English.

(i) in the dative case :

them 80/26.

(ii) in the objective case :

them 58/32, 63/11, 77/25.

In the way of syntax it is to be noted that, in involved sentences, they may be redundant both in (i) nominative and (ii) objective case :

(i) I wol that al those persones . . . thei reioyse 62/7.

(ii) The resydewe of all my goodes . . . I leve them to 169/13.

(iii) Another anomaly is that this personal pronoun is occasionally used as a demonstrative, in a way still constantly in plebeian use though frowned on by standard speech :

to be deuyded betwene them thre persones 193/16 (1535).

all them vj. chyldren 232/1 (1540).

In the same way those, would now be used, and not them, in —many of them not auctorized (1536) 196/25.

Note further that, in the earlier period of these documents, there survive examples of the older hem form, both (i) in dative and (ii) in objective case :

(i) like as I have graunted hem 62/8.

(ii) objective after prepositions: betwene hem 61/25; for hem 41/30; of hem 63/8, 75/24, 97/32; to hem 62/1, 97/8, 28; vnto hem 128/14; with hem 97/29.

objective after transitive verb: 41/36, 77/36, 89/21, 97/24, 28.

Reflexive Pronoun.

The reflexive element is self. In the earlier set of documents this is added to the personal pronouns, but never receives plurality mark, plurality being indicated only by the pronoun to which the reflexive element is attached. This restriction is partly observed in the second period : e. g.

but them selves 197/12 (1533).

The personal pronoun is found used reflexively without augmentation by self (see p. 291).

The reflexive pronoun admits of a variety of irregular, ad sensum constructions :

howe every oon doth vse them selves 197/12 (1536).

In the second set of documents the modern use emerges, in which self becomes the important factor in the compound pronoun and is preceded by the possessive pronoun :

call every deanry by ther selves 195/11 (1535).

Possessive Pronouns.

Possessive pronoun of the first person singular.

Note may be made of the way in which the alternative forms my and mine are used.

My is generally used before consonants, but in several cases it stands before vowels exactly as it does now :

my aras 57/11.

my auncestres 76/28, 124/15.

my executours 44/3, 68/18, 75/23.

my obit 47/29.

my othir godes 56/12 ; my other manoyrs 74/23.

Myn is very rarely used before consonants, but is regularly used before vowels :

myn runian 51/28 ; but my runian 55/27.

myne affeccion 46/12.

myne armes 45/22, 86/14.

myn aunceters 77/21.

myn entent 75/22.

myn executors 41/2, 44/9, 58/34, 120/9.

myn interment 57/17.

myn use 74/24.

My and Myn before h : supra, p. 279.

Myn inverted :

Ther soules helthe and myn 182/28.

Myn preceded by prepositions :

other friendis of myn 41/32.

every tenant of myn 42/11.

a longe gowne of myn 51/31.

ale of myne 56/11.

for my wyffe saule and for myne 53/28.

every godchilde of myne 192/13.

Possessive pronoun of third person singular.

for my soull and hyrs 232/13.

Possessive pronoun of third person plural.

Three typical spellings occur, with (i) ai, the sound now in use, (ii) ei, possibly representing (supra, p. 293) a different sound, (iii) a short e, as now in some dialects :

thair 97/25, 36.

ther 48/7.

Demonstrative pronouns.

Demonstrative pronoun this.

The plural is found in a great variety of spellings :

thes articles 97/19.
theis wittenesse 64/25 ; thies 259/10.
this present, 89/28.
ilk on of yis (= pis) 55/25.
thys x. prestes 54/1.
this premisses 175/16.

Instead of these, in one instance, theke is used :

theke CC. marces 68/21.

Demonstrative pronoun that.

The normal plural is found, and also some alternative forms :

al those persones 62/6.
thoo that I haue here 42/2.
thoo that be at London 43/22.
thoo maners 74/25.

An anomaly is that used for those :

that x. quartiers 58/2.

Relative Pronouns.

In the English of these deeds distinct preference is shown for the indeclinable pronouns—the same for things inanimate and animate, and for all numbers and cases. That, which, the which, are constantly in use ; the declinable who, especially in the earlier period, is very sparsely used :

the moste eternall god that made it 119/17.
costes of him that so sweth 112/17.
to go to him that is next in descender 124/3.
the place that I holde 89/27.
Yow alle that stande here 99/16.
all . . . people that . . . this . . . wryting . . . shall heere 81/1.
all men that I haue offendid 46/14.
tenementes that I haue purchased 62/23, 123/15.

In some cases that, relative, is preceded by that demonstrative, expressing the Latin id quod :

I wol . . . that then his brother . . . haue that that is beqwethed 124/2; cp. 258/34, 259/7.

In other cases the relative does duty for both pronouns, as in Latin quod may be used for id quod :

[I forgive] my tenantes al that þe [= they] have offendyd me 46/7.

[where I have not paid] þerfor that may be knawen resonably 46/4.

bedys of corall as far as that I have may laste 50/12.

I wol that myn executours . . . haue that is necessary for hem 41/29.

euery parcell of that [= that which is] made vnto . . .
Clemens 168/32.

except that [= that which] longeth to the carpenter
258/22; cp. 265/31.

This pronoun is also used in various idiomatic ways :

to this tyme that I was examined bifor yow 97/12 [that = at which].

That was written in several forms besides its normal spelling :

(i) with the 'thorn' letter—þat.

(ii) with y, which was stupidly substituted for the thorn—pore men yat schal hold the torchis 55/4.
ilke clark y^t helpes to syng 53/7.

(iii) without the initial letter—

my gret boke . . . at was the freerys 48/9 [at = that].
to fede yam with at come 55/2.

Relative Pronoun who.

wommen to whom I have granted 61/26 (1452).

persones to whom I have graunted 62/6, cp. 124/11.

my wiff in whom I put my . . . truste 75/19; cp. 118/29.

Ihesu whom I dayly beseche 90/7.

In the earlier portion of the deeds I have found the relative who, in the nominative case, only in compounds :

who so euer 41/7; who so 68/27.

Examples of the use of who in the second portion of the deeds are :

as who wolde saye 252/5.

by goddes grace who yow preserue 264/13.

dame Sanche Digby to whome I commytt 147/30.

Thomas . . . and willyam whom I make . . . myn executors 162/2, cp. 169/16, 261/27.

whome . . . he badde to be content 252/4.

my wiffe . . . whome I . . . make my executrice 183/18;
cp. 185/16, 192/20, 233/4, 265/35.

by whose authorytie 197/7.

The blunder in grammar in the following quotation (1537) possibly indicates the unfamiliarity of the pronoun: myn executors, whome is Sir Gilbert . . . and Sir Nicholas 182/17.

There is an odd inversion of the natural order in a will of 1540: I pray . . . whome I . . . make supervisor . . . Edward Dymoke 233/6.

The compound is also found: bi whom so euer 259/6.

Relative pronoun which.

Which is used for the neuter relative (singular and plural), exactly as we now use it.

a flat pece . . . which is . . . at london 43/34.

att which tyme 97/10.

tymbir and wod . . . which I have solde 62/1.

bedding and napery which I have not besett 40/32.

sawcers which I am serued with-all 44/1.

But it is also used where grammar now would require who or whom.

myn executours which shall be Ionet . . . and Sir Robert 120/10.

your oratours . . . whiche have but litell 129/5.

ij. of my sons which I fynde at Cambridge 121/37.

to them whiche he thinketh beste 261/29.

The form in which h is dropped (supra, p. 278) is found:

wich Napery I wol be sold 122/16.

This pronoun is also used in the same way in the second portion of the deeds:

money whiche dothe remayn in a bagge 153/30.

whiche margery . . . I make myn executrix 156/25.

my feoffes wiche now stond feoffed 151/29.

household stuff wych was bequethyd 134/11.

all and singuler wiche varyance 175/17.

It is sometimes used with a verb in the singular, although the antecedent is plural: bookes whiche was intitled 249/9.

Relative pronoun the which.

This is perhaps the pronoun most frequently in use for all genders. Examples are:

Roger Iordan, the which is known for a notary 116/2.

the which Margery is lyvyng 66/5.

for the which I crye god mercy 115/10 = fault.

those persones the which be bounden for me 62/10.

my feoffies . . . the which I haue enfeoffed 73/8.

opinions, the whiche I haue long taught 99/2.

lettres by the which I haue falsly deceyued 115/3.

The form without h occurs (supra, p. 278):

my indenture the wiche I delyuere 89/28.

This pronoun is used exactly in the same way in the second portion of these deeds:

Agnes . . . and william . . . the whiche I make my . . . executoures 150/22.

the annuite . . . the wiche I wyll it shall continewe 168/37.

xLi li. . . . of the wiche I will 168/17.

Relative pronoun whilk.

The use of this pronoun is confined to one deed (1451). It survives in Scots dialects, but (I fancy) most frequently in the form the whilk. It is odd to find, in this one deed, the variant spellings by wh and by quh, still recognizable in Scots. Cp. ilk, p. 300:

bedys . . . qwhilke my lord Cardenale yaue me 46/24.

bedys . . . whilke I gart make 46/27.

t[w]o almar . . . whilke ar ordand 48/24.

iiij li. of mony, qwylyk I will be putte perto 52/25.

other godes . . . whilk ar not 56/12.

Distributive pronoun.

Each and compounds.

eche of the sayde . . . chyldren 169/2 = every individual out of several individuals.

iche of myn executours 63/8.

thei or ich of them 120/30.

ichon of us 112/16 ; iche oon of them 265/30.

This ichon is found in an odd ad sensum construction :

ichon of vs . . . haue subscribed 112/19.

Ilk and compounds.

These forms, with one exception, are found only in one deed (1451); cp. whilk, p. 299. The example in 58/32 is in a deed of 1452, also Lincolnshire :

ilke prior and priores that comes 52/9 : cp. 52/11, 12, 14, 15, 21, 22, 23 ; 53/1, 3, 5, 7, 8, 12, 13.

Ilkon of yam (= þam) 50/12, cp. 50/17 ; 51/16, 19, 24, 27, 29, 32 ; 55/19, 21, 23, 25, 28, 32 ; 57/18.

to ilkon of them 58/32 ; ilkone 56/20.

Ilkyn of yam 51/13, 14.

Every and compounds.

to every towne 43/13, 16.

to eueryche of the iiij. ordres of the freris 43/7, 258/13.

she doo kepe my childern and every of them 156/23.

and every of them to have for there labour 157/23.

I will that euery off them have 147/38.

Either (of two individuals).

Like they (supra, p. 292), this word has alternative spellings : (i) an a type, (ii) an e type. These probably represent different pronunciations :

(i) athir of tham 52/35.

ayther of my sistres 58/25.

aythir of yam 52/3.

(ii) either of the bayles 77/7.

either of them 78/18.

either of vs 112/17.

eyther of the proctours 77/3.

Either is found in ad sensum construction, as if it were both :

accions that either of vs have 112/17.

either of þe parties have put there seales 206/18;
cp. 269/26.

we, either the sayd parties 175/18.

Either (of more than two).

to either of the said chirches 181/24 (four churches).

Nouns.

Plural Forms.

A multitude of plural forms must be set aside because they are only expansions of contractions in the MS., and are therefore of no authority. In the text they are sufficiently differentiated by the italicizing of the termination.

Plural formed by change of vowel.

If the slight indications given by the spelling could be relied upon, it might be concluded that at this period some words, which now have one form for both singular and plural, e. g. sheep, formed their plural by shortening their vowels :

x score schep 51/3 may be taken to represent the modern plural 'sheep'.

iiiij. schep 52/4 is possibly a shortened form, only it must be admitted that this form appears as a singular, j. shep 64/13.

Other examples of this possibly shortened form for plural are:

sheppe 231/13, 18.

shippe 57/28.

Plural in -er.

Child, in some cases, retained its obsolete simple plural, in the second period as well as in the first :

childer 122/23, 124/11, 154/16, 23 (1533).

chylder 164/21 (1534), 232/3, 16 (1540).

But in the majority of cases it had already had attached to it, as a second plurality mark, -en.

chylderyn 161/19 (1533).

childern 145/27 (1529), 156/9 (1533).

cheldren 169/5 (1534).

children 166/12 (1534), 192/15 (1535).

chyldryn 155/7 (1533), 161/25 (1533).

In 122/27 child may refer to Richard alone, but is more probably a clerical error for childer, as in 122/23.

Plural in -en.

Cowe occurs in the singular, e. g. 41/37, 42/6, 51/28, 185/7, 247/2; kowe 247/10. Its plural occurs in the form kynne 42/1, 3, 8; 153/27; but also in the form kye 123/32, 132/12, 147/28, 231/17.

Sow has for plural swynne 51/26.

Ewe occurs in the singular both as eue and as arwe 185/8, 10, &c. Two forms of its plural are found: ewen 42/1, 3; ewes 192/12, and yowes 51/9.

bredren 182/1.

Allholon 219/8; but Allhalowys 161/10, 166/1, 264/23;

all Hælouse 246/9.

Allsoulen 180/7, 191/20.

Oddly enough, hosen does not occur, the ending -es being used.

my hosys 51/23.

a payre of blak hoses 58/15.

Plural in -es.

There are numerous examples in which this ending appears as -s (occasionally written with the old symbol ȝ), without adding a new syllable:

candil styks 47/5.

cosyns 50/20.

creditours 63/6.

executours 63/7.

labours 63/8.

matyns 47/19.

ornamentȝ 73/31.

prests 47/14.
 remenauntz 42/8.
 sawcers 44/1.
 successurs 48/7.
 tenementz 73/15.
 vestements 47/8.

There are, in addition to these, cases where this ending could not be attached to the word as a syllable but only as a letter: e.g. feoffes 73/32; feoffies 82/17.

There are, on the other hand, plenty of examples in which this ending could not be attached except as a distinct syllable:

chargies 112/9.
 crosses 47/8; crossys 47/5.
 dirigies 120/16.
 horsys 57/16.
 messes 53/23; messys 53/27.
 messuagies 171/14.
 wagies 145/34.

But the general suggestion of the forms is that, at this period, -es was felt to be a distinct syllable, to be sounded separately, not merely where position demanded it to be so sounded but in all cases. Hence probably the variety of spellings it presents -ies, -is, -us, -ys, showing that the writer regarded it as a syllable, not as a mere sibilation.

 bedys 49/21.
 bequestis 121/3; beqwestis 64/18.
 bokys 47/4.
 bottelles 39/30; botellys 39/34, 42/29.
 botys 51/22.
 copys 45/18, 121/10; copys 47/4.
 dettes 46/9; dettis 64/18; dettys 46/2, 89/37.
 freres 117/32; frerys 76/34, 117/27. landes 137/27; landis 73/1; landys 48/20, 168/27.
 lordys 63/7.
 profutez 73/21.

 rentis 47/25; renttys 48/25.
 ropys 133/24.
 saltcotys 123/1.
 sowlys 89/24.
 spones 43/28; sponys 43/26; sponnys 232/21.
 successorus 47/25.
 talys 49/21.

Plural of words ending in -f.

In the earlier set of these deeds, there is no instance of f changing to v before the plural suffix:

cnyffes 52/1.
 glofys 51/24.
 wiffes 82/32, 85/23; wyffes 82/32, 84/16, 85/24, 89/20, 90/2.

This is also found in the second set of deeds, e. g.
 wiffes 142/1.

But in these the -v forms appear:

lives 144/6 (1529), 153/35 (1533); lyves 267/10 (1517).
 stavis 251/29 (1535).

It must be noted, however, that the alternative -v form is found also in the singular: see supra, p. 276.

Plurals without -es ending.

In certain cases, in order to avoid sibilation, the plurality ending seems omitted. But in some of these instances duplicate forms have the ending:

ij. chaley3 38/6 = chalices. In 77/10 chaley3, and in 47/4, 9 chalis, the word is probably (but not certainly) plural.

surplys 47/5 = (probably) surplices.

oon of the Iustice of the common place 81/10 = Justices of the Common Pleas.

appurtenaunce 68/14, 81/12, &c.; appurtenaun3 78/28;
but appurtenaunces 76/7; appurtenaunc3 81/19.

service 47/20, 82/11 = services: but services 52/6.

j. of my best cart hors 49/10; j. of my best plogh hors 49/10: but cart horses 41/36; horses 41/33.

evidence 134/24; but evydenses 168/27.

witnesse 96/4; wytnes 155/20 (1533); witenes 221/29.

ynche 257/29, 33.

In certain words ending in -el, the word is generally used collectively, and therefore has no plurality mark.

vessell means the whole household set of metal dishes to serve meat at table 135/1; e. g.

(a) of silver 40/28, 43/35, 62/31;

(b) of pewter 40/35, 67/34, 191/30;

(c) of brass 191/31.

Such an expansion as vesselles 67/34 is therefore very doubtful.

apparell means a set (i) of hangings for an altar 38/14, 39/3; (ii) of harness for a horse; (iii) of gear for a plough 168/22. It seems to be used collectively:

ij. apparell of white for the ij. auters 38/10.

The expansion apparelles 123/31 is very doubtful.

The word other is used collectively, and does not use the -s of plurality:

pray . . . for al othir 47/28.

with other that be lymyed 62/16.

the said lord . . . present ij. other in semblable wise 78/8;

cf. 78/20.

amonges other 81/5 (persons).

with other 155/21; with other moo 221/30.

all other contrary to . . . holy chirch 99/13 (opinions).

as many in nombre as the other 250/28.

The word year seems to be as often without, as with, plurality ending. We have:

ij. yere 120/29.

v. yer 122/7; but v. yeres 246/23.

vj. yere 74/18.

ix. yeere 74/12, 78/26.

xij. yeere 76/20, 78/31; but xij. yeris 68/19.

So also:

by no maner of meane 80/29; by other meayne 147/1;

but by any maner of means 168/29.

So also :

a hundrith marke 221/22.

Where a word is followed by several instances of its applications it may stand in the singular :

the parson of Somerethby, Erghum, and Stane 47/24.

the prior of Thyrnholm, of Elsted, of Newsted 52/19.

the kirke of Somerethby, Erghum, and Stayne 54/26.

Plurals are found where modern use prefers the singular :

at nedys 52/18, 26 = at need.

graynes and corne 191/25, 26.

This is found in the name of certain cloths :

Raynes 39/19, 22.

And furs :

a bed of ermynes 62/18.

gowne furred with matrons 43/2.

The spelling in one case probably disguises the plurality :

j. paire of gardevyaunce, 42/28, in the duplicate original (Chadworth's Register, lf. 85 bk.) appears as gardeviens, and is therefore probably plural of gardevin = a big-bellied wine-bottle.

Some cases of absence of plural ending are most easily explained by assuming a clerical error :

to almare 48/24 = two almars.

iiij. fetherbeddes with all thing longyng to them 162/21.

payr of coberd 161/15.

Possessive Case Singular.

The ordinary form of the possessive ending for the singular was es, and the suggestion of the text is that it was often spoken as a distinct syllable :

of mannes age 51/27.

for my saule and my wyfys 54/2.

Several instances of it must be set aside because expansions of contractions in the MS. :

Pykringes wyff 44/6.

seruantes wifes 57/1.

In the following instances the syllabic feature seems to have disappeared. The apostrophe mark was not apparently in use.

Where it does occur in the text it is open to suspicion of being a transcriber's error.

my obit and my wiffs 47/29.

landes yat I haf of his modys 56/24.

The possessive ending is dropped, and possession is indicated by mere juxtaposition. These instances are too numerous to be due to mere clerical slips. As in the plural forms (supra, p. 304,), some of them may be explained by a desire to avoid a hissing sound, others by the difficulty felt with -els.

sent John hospitall 38/21, but Johns 40/10; Jones 38 note.

Jonet, Jacob wyff 43/3 = Jacob's.

at my moneth mynde 43/10.

our lady auter 48/16; but our ladyes awter 265/16.

John of Cumberworth doghtyrs 50/19.

my wiff xxx. day 54/34.

the tenement that was late Thomas Tanfelde, and now is Richard Spragett 118/18.

kirk wark 120/2, 3, 6.

our lady werk 120/4, 231/3; our lady yle, 246/10.

my housbond sowle 43/9.

boke of Dauid sauter 48/9 = David's.

William fitz William sowle 53/24.

my ffather and mother soules 159/20.

hyr father and mother soulles 232/5.

Thomas Clarell doughter 42/25.

Elizabet Richard Clarell wyff 42/32, 44/7.

the which were sumtyme Alianore hill 81/24, 82/23 = Hill's.

The form his, afterwards in such frequent use, appears in only a few instances:

Thomas Clarell his doughter 42 note (found in Chedworth's Register, lf. 85 bk.).

the kyng his chappell, 250/11.

Anomalies occur, e. g. the plural ending attached to a possessive pronoun, by apposition with a noun in the possessive:

for my housbond sowle and myn oonyes 43/9 = mine own.

Possessive Case Plural.

Here the case has to be gathered from the sense, the apostrophe mark not being yet in use:

after myn executours discrecion 40/34; after my executours discrecion 44/3; better expressed 41/2, after the discrecion of myn executours.

my gret boke . . . [th]at was the frererys 48/9 i. e. friars'.

my yereday and my auncestours 124/15.

Adjectives.

Adjective placed after the noun.

There are a considerable number of instances in which, contrary to modern use, the adjective follows the noun. Participles used as adjectives are treated in the same way. Some of these are clearly reproductions of old Law-Latin stock phrases.

ij. chaley's gilte 38/6; cp. 46/1.

a reredose red 39/4.

j. paire of candelstykkes siluer 39/9; cp. 43/26.

towelles of Raynes playne 39/22.

surnapes of Raynes wroght 39/23.

j. cheyer coruen 39/24.

my tenaunt's ease perpetuall 41/5.

j. sprever white 43/20; a yong palfray white 62/35.

a flat pece gilt vncovered 43/33.

ij. standing coppes covered 62/29; cp. 62/35.

gretying in our lord everlasting 81/4 = salutem in domino sempiternam.

by the service dew and accustomed 118/21.

I make . . . my wyff my executrice alone 118/28.

sateyn figury 124/9.

the liffe naturall 144/11; but the naturall life 145/4.

counsell lernede 227/17 (1539).

Adjective separated from its noun by a pronoun.

of this simple my last wille 118/32.

Adjective as well as noun with plural ending.

In certain stock phrases, the plural ending is attached not only to the noun but also to its adjective. There are, however, generally alternative forms of such phrases without plurality ending of the adjective, showing that the practice was going out of use.

heires males 82/24, 33 ; 83/8, 15, &c.
issue male³, 83/18 : issue male³ 83/19 ; but issew male 83/7 ; issue male 83/37.
prestes seculers 53/35 ; but seculer prestes 76/27.
freres mynours 117/27 ; freres prechiers 117/30 ; freres Carmys 117/32.

lettres patentes 129/10, 130/13.

Of kin to these is the anomalous form, 62/34, oon of the best & ij. meners = meaner ones.

Comparison of Adjectives.

More is used to form comparative of one-syllable adjectives:
more sure 255/6.

The use of most to form the superlative is found, as in modern use, with adjectives of several syllables, e. g.

moste eternall 119/17.
moste habundaunt 130/9.

But also occasionally where -est would now be used :

moste poer 120/33 ; porest 157/17.

The superlative is used, anomalously, in comparison of two individuals : to the eldest of my ij. chyldryn . . . Item, to the yonger 155/8, 9.

the longiste lyver of . . . william and george 201/1.

Mention may be made of the forms uttrest = uttermost 69/3 ; mooste goodlieste 250/23 ; mooste worthieste 252/3 ; more fayrer, 253/4.

The Verb.

I bring together, under convenient heads, the chief points which arise in respect of verbs and their inflexions.

The Verb to-be.

Imperative: Be itt knowen 139/4.

Present tense singular.

he first person singular is am 43/35, 90/4, 97/16, &c.

The third person singular is, most frequently, is; e.g. 39/4, 40/6, 43/27, 79/5, &c.; but there is an alternative spelling viz. es; e.g. 46/34, 47/2, 52/2, 53/29, 31, 56/29, 32, 35 found in 1451.

Present tense plural: first person.

The modern form are occurs, with some variety of spelling:

we ar beholdyn 47/29.

war 54/2 = we are.

But the older forms survive (i) been (ii) be.

(i) after we been discessed 145/27.

we bene enformede 220/7 (1538).

(ii) we be beholdyn 53/29.

I . . . and I . . . be fully agreed 112/1, 2.

while we be on live 145/27.

Present tense plural: third person.

The modern are is found, with some variety of spelling:

all other necessarijs that ar nayled 41/26.

my fader and modyr ar bered 54/1.

godes . . . whilk ar not vthirwisse disposid 56/13.

t[w]o almar . . . whilke er ordand for keyping of vestmentes 48/24.

many . . . ar permytted 196/25.

william and george ar . . . bounden 202/7.

The archaic been still survives to some extent:

spones that ben here 39/11.

myn executours that been in this contre 41/29 [but be in the duplicate copy: see 40 note].

youre saide Oratours been greuously vexed 130/7.

commodities which bene reputed 240/1 (1544).

But the form most in use is the clipped form in which the verbal stem is without plurality mark:

the remenaunt³ . . . that be here 42/8.

ther be iij. depe disshis 44/5.

those persones the which be bounden 62/10.

the persones that bee of that thair opinion 97/25.

after my debtes be payd 156/4, 193/14.

charges . . . what so ever they be 177/15.

Anomalies are found:

as they es deuyded 47/17.

It is sometimes a moot point whether this part of the verb is indicative or subjunctive: see infra.

Past tense singular.

Was is in regular use for first and third persons:

I was examined 97/12.

where as I was boren 160/18.

ouere lorde was skowrged 46/33.

Past tense plural.

Were is in regular use for third person:

other matiers that wer betwene hem 61/25.

landis . . . that were 82/23.

such goodes . . . as were bequethed 156/21.

Anomalies occur:

conveticles was maad 97/9.

ij^{li}. wiche . . . was delivered vnto me 232/31.

Subjunctive.

There was in this period much sensitiveness to the existence of the subjunctive mood, though, from the disuse of inflexions, it is often difficult to say positively that a form is certainly subjunctive and not indicative.

The following are some of the subjunctival elements:

(i) suppositions, e. g. clauses introduced by if.

(ii) potentialities, e. g. clauses which would now be expressed by the auxiliaries may, shall, &c.

(iii) intentions: e. g. clauses following after I will that, I order that, &c. Very often that is not verbally expressed. In modern use, an auxiliary, as shall, is used.

(iv) indirect speech; e. g. clauses following on I say that, &c.

(v) in simple relative clauses: e.g.

brethern which be bounde 259/13.

children which be willing 267/13.

Present Subjunctive.

The form for all persons of both numbers is be. It will be sufficient to give only one or two examples under each of the above heads.

(i) suppositions:

if she be married 74/6.

onlesse thanne they be absent 77/26.

if bothe be not so absent 77/27.

my elther feoffes, if ther any bee 80/30.

withoute youre . . . grace . . . be shewed 130/10.

if it be thought 261/15.

(ii) potentialities:

as towching my horses that be here at the day of my departing 41/33.

in such forme that hit be 76/30.

all my childer that be lyvyng 122/23.

vnto the tyme that they be att lawfull yerres of discrecion 138/12.

enacted . . . that it be lafull 255/12: cp. 256/10.

bi whom so euer . . . it be forfeited 259/7.

if it be thought . . . that he be of . . . discrecion 261/16.

(iii) intentions:

I wil it be expoundid 57/6.

I wil that al my horsys be kepid 57/16.

I . . . wol . . . that . . . Iohn . . . and Richard . . . be saued 61/21.

I will that all the bokes . . . be distrybute 134/4.

I will that my mortuary be paid 139/23.

(iv) indirect speech:

I am enformed that some . . . persones there be 196/19.

Past subjunctive.

The form for all persons of both numbers is presumably were, but examples, in the deeds, are very few.

I wold my howsald wer holdyn forth 56/3.

till the mater of variaunce . . . were determynede 220/6 (1538).

were he neuer soo noble 251/25.

Present participle.

This is used in various idiomatic ways, and in inverted order.

(i) present participle, equivalent to who are, which are :

to the other v. servauntes beyng at Grysby 58/31.

all the lightes beyng in the same church 64/14.

(ii) present participle, equivalent to a clause following if :

to the parson . . . beyng present 118/6 = if he be.

(iii) present participle at the end of its clause and separated by that clause from its noun :

Richard Archer, of good mynde and memory beyng 64/5.

hoole of mynde and in good remembraunce beinge 137/1.

Past participle.

There are some instances of the clipt form be (= been) :

I haue bee present 97/6.

opinions haue bee taught 97/7.

in whom my trust . . . hath be all way 118/30.

it hath be agreed 257/15.

Verb to-be used impersonally.

Subjunctive.

if so be 57/9, 19.

iff soo be that 156/14.

in case be that thei come 77/7.

Verb to-give : and its compounds.

The forms of this verb are of interest phonetically as showing the hesitancy between (i) g and y (supra, p. 276), and (ii) f and v (supra, p. 276).

I bring them into as short compass as may be.

Infinitive : I shal gif 97/29 ; I shall giff 112/5.

I shal yef 97/27, 28, 111/8.

Imperative : giff it 45/11 ; yiff yam gette bedes 50/13.

Indicative present : I gif 45/13.

I giff 45/23, 46/1, 118/14 ; I gyff 45/5.

I yeff 118/11.

Indicative past :

my lord Bedford gafe me 42 note (Chedworth Register
lf. 85 bk.)

I yaf . . . faith 97/7.

Crist yaff Cayme 69/9.

my lord of Bedford yave me 42/31.

Present participle.

giffing 123/35 ; gevyng 264/12.

Past participle.

gyfen 47/9.

gyfyn 48/26, 50/19, 54/6, 57/3.

yeven 99/3, 111/4, 221/9, 238/17.

yoven 202/13.

Infinitive :

to forgife 130/14.

to forgiff 46/14, 128/13.

Past participle :

forgiffyne 46/10.

forgyfyn 28.

Verb to-do.

In these deeds, this verb presents itself in two aspects :

(a) It is a verb by itself, expressing action or making. Its forms, as a verb in its own right, had better come with the corresponding forms of other verbs (infra, pp. 318 sqq.).

(b) It is a feeble expletive, used in a foolish periphrastic conjugation of the present and past tenses of ordinary verbs, both in the indicative and in the subjunctive. In this form, it barely appears in the first set of these deeds, but is very frequent in the second. A condensed series of its occurrence may be given here, as supplying a sort of bird's-eye-view of the change from the more manly earlier period.

Present tense of to-do (expletive).

- (1456) I woll that . . . myn executours do perfourme my testament 89/13.
- (1529) if eny of them . . . doo disturbe 145/7.
- (1529) I will that my . . . feoffes doo suffre 137/26.
- (1529) as . . . dothe . . . appere 137/18.

- (1535) I do ordeyn (or do ordre) and make my executours 180/12, 183/18, 184/11, 193/23, and passim.
- (1535) I doo bequethe 182/22.
- (1535) if soe be that the above named . . . doe fortune to departe 182/24.
- (1535) I . . . doo sende 195/1.
- (1535) where they doo appere 195/11.
- (1536) them that dothe preache 196/32.
- (1536) curates that dothe admytte 196/34.
- (1536) they doo come 197/7; they doo vse 197/8.
- (1536) every oon dothe vse 197/12.
- (1536) dothe demyse 197/26, 234/2, and passim in leases.
- (1536) hym that ffirste dothe soo decease 200/8, 16.
- (1536) hym that dothe soo survyve 200/11.
- (1536) doo . . . content and paye 201/25, 32, &c.
- (1536) dothe covenante 204/12, and passim in leases.
- (1536) do not therby offende 205/5.

 (1540) do take a generall quyttance 232/24.
 (1540) I do owe 232/30.

Past tense.

Of the past tense of the verb used as an expletive, there is no example in the first period of these deeds and singularly few in the second period.

- (1509) he dyd awe, 28.
 (1533) my selffe dyd bye 158/22.
 (1536) if ye didde knowe 196/15.

Subjunctive.

I wol that the covent . . . do syng a dirige 121/21.

Verb to-will.Present tense.

This verb is found with several meanings, of which there may be taken here.

(A) to-will means to give consent to a thing, to be willing to act in a prescribed way.

(B) to-will means to order to be done in a certain way, to give definite directions (especially in a testamentary deed).

(C) to-will implies simple futurity.

In each of these meanings, the verb is found in two typical spellings (see note at top of p. 37):

- (i) will, wyll, wil, wyl, wille, wylle.
 (ii) woll, wolle, wol, &c.

It may be convenient to bring together some typical instances of these uses and spellings.

(A) to be willing to, to desire to.

(i) form will :

if so be at yai will bide and will be rewlid 57/20.

in case that . . . any of my childer . . . wille not thryve

124/11.

yf he wyll play ye honest man 232/34.

iff . . . the . . . wardence . . . will sele 265/26.

(ii) form wol :

I charge al my . . . executours that thei wol perfourme
this 69/6.

prestis that wol say masse 77/13.

if my wyff wol not dwelle 122/19.

so that he wol thryve and be vertuously disposed 122/28.

if my eldist sone wol by any parte 123/34.

giffen to him that wol thryve 124/13.

as ye woll eschue 221/8.

(B) to order :

(especially to order by testament)

We . . . woll and chardge you 221/3.

(i) form will :

I will my body ly still 45/8.

I will . . . that my dettys be qwyte 46/2.

I will the kirk of Stayn haue 47/1.

I wil yt Iohn Tailbusse haf 55/33 ; cp. 56/11, 57/8.

I wyl my kyste be made 45/11.

(ii) form woll :

I woll 40/7, 62/15, 77/32, 89/12, 90/2.

I wol 40/32, 35 ; 41/7, 42/1, 44/2, 61/19, 26, 31 ; 62/6, 63/1, 64/10, 72/10, 73/1, 74/8, 75/9, 76/18, 77/9, 78/14, 80/30, 81/16, 90/4, 120/16, 121/3, 122/1, 123/3, 124/1.

I wull that ther be yerely 261/31.

(C) futurity (= shall).

(i) form will :

If any example occurs, I have failed to notice it.

(ii) form woll :

as he wol answeare before god 69/1 ; cp. 63/9.

as thei wol answer to god 75/13.

Past tense.

The same differences of meaning, and similar differences of spelling, are found in the past tense.

(A) to be willing :

I . . . wold never utter 97/11.

(B) (a) to be desirous :—

as who wolde saye 252/5.

(b) to direct by testament :

I willed 76/6.

I wyllled 78/25.

Verb would.

The form would is used also in a frequent optative sense which makes it in meaning a new verb. In this sense I wold = I could wish, I look forward to and hope to see.

I wold my howsald were holdyn forth 56/3.

as thei wold I dyd for theym 58/35.

Verb : Imperative.

Pleasith itt you to be aduertised 249/3.

Verb : Present Indicative Singular.

Termination of third person in -eth.

The -eth termination is still the prevalent form. I bring together, therefore, a few of the numerous instances in which it occurs :

thapparell that longith 38/14, 41/22.

j. paire of fustyance that lyeth 41/12.

j. copborde that standith 41/19.

he that kepith hem 41/36.

he hath receyved 63/6.

as him semeth best 64/20.

this lettre . . . berith wnesse 65/3.

god hathe called vs 73/20 ; god hath yeuen them 80/26.

as long as my lyff lastith 113/8, 114/4.

my bay fole that goth 120/7 ; goeth 138/12.

money that Breknok owith 121/6.

when it fallith 122/32 ; fallyth 123/4.

my lord of wynchester hath 123/6.

when he commyth 123/8.

his brother that hath halsted 124/2.

when he laboreth 124/30.

Thomas Wortley . . . doth this his penance 127/34.

he . . . prayeth all yow people 128/14.

as he thynkyth 185/18 ; cp. 261/29.

Anomalous use of -eth ending of third person singular.

In the second period, there are some instances in which the third personal ending is used with pronoun of the first person :

I . . . hath giuen 139/30 (1433): the error is perhaps due to the intrusion (in apposition to I) of Ser John Digby.

I . . . maketh 191/7 (1535): here also a name, in apposition, comes between pronoun and verb.

Termination of Third Person Singular in -s.

to hym that fillis my grave 45/12.

evere man that has fee 46/26.

the box . . . that hingys 50/24.

ilke clerk . . . that helpys to syng or sais 52/14, 22, 23.

the prest yt kepys the cure 54/7, 30.

in maner that folows 119/16.

a woman that lyes 136/12.

Anomalous use of -s ending of third person singular :

whar it suffys not 55/6=suffices: ending perhaps dropped to avoid sibilance.

Third person singular without ending.

This particular instance is probably due to an accidental omission of the first personal pronoun before the name, cp. 'I, the same William lord lovell, . . . have' 81/5 with 'William lord lovell Burnell and of holand send gretying' 81/3.

Verb: Present Indicative: Third Person Plural.(i) ending -s.

It is possible that there is one survival of this northern dialect form, in that deed of 1451 which contains so many other northern forms and words.

ijj. hynys y^t dryfys the plogh 55/30.

(ii) ending -en.

There are survivals of the midland dialect -en plurality ending. Alongside of some of them are examples of the modern form without plurality mark, or of the northern -eth ending.

the new mattes that lyen 41/14: but lye 41 note.

xij. qwysshens that longen 41/23: but longyth 41 note.

sommes that folowen 78/34.

(iii) ending -eth.

This northern dialect form continues right on into the second period, though instances of its occurrence in the first period are few. It is to be noticed, however, that it actually occurs only in legal formulae, in which words and combinations of words were repeated parrot-like from a set form, with no feeling of correct grammar.

we . . . hath putt herevnto owre seales 178/3.

thabbot and covent . . . hath graunted 132/2, 10, 15, 31 (1509).

the forsaid abbott and covent . . . byndeth them 132/32 (1509).

lande, the which Coke and Penley now occupieth and holdith 167/20 (1534).

William and george couenauntyth and graunteth 199/3 (1536); cp. 225/6.

the parties . . . haithe . . . putt there seales 212/5 (1537).

his saide tenauntes claymeth 221/1 (1538).

rector, fealowes and scolers . . . dothe demyse 225/6 (1539).

the said parties standethe bounden 229/33 (1539).

whiche obligations bearithe date 229/35.

first fructes . . . comethe 241/23: in an anacolouthon.

Antichristes . . . oppugneth 249/6.

wheroff lyeth . . . xvij. acres 268/15.

This -eth form is especially in use with the indeclinable pronoun that (supra, p. 296). Assuming that the -eth form was practically obsolete, the explanation of this particular frequency may be (i) in some cases, the feeling that this pronoun was really singular caused the verb attached to it to disregard its preceding plural antecedent; and (ii) in other cases, ad sensum concords with the nearer of two members of a component antecedent, as is found in Latin. I give the examples, and put forward my two guesses at explanation of them for the mere guesses they are:

in the maner and fourme that folowith 72/4.

any that holdeth heresies 111/9.

persones . . . that dothe to the contrary 196/20; and dothe treate 196/21.

names of them that doth preache 196/32.

curates that dothe admytte 196/34.

holydayes that fallethe 226/28.

So also with as:

doubtes as dothe . . . gendre . . . dissencion 196/22.

all suche as hathe transgressed 196/31.

all suche as settithe forthe 196/36.

So also with the indeclinable pronoun which:

all other chardgies whiche of olde tyme hathe bene due 199/13.

(iv) Standard form without inflexion.

From first to last there are examples of the modern third plural, in which the verbal stem is used without any inflexion:

all the costres that longe 39/13 (1450).

all men that come 52/16.

the pore men that hold yam 52/29.

Verb: Past Indicative.

The forms for past tense differ little from those now in use.

Was: see p. 311. Were: see p. 311. Gave, &c.: see p. 313.

(i) Forms in -ed.

bedys . . . y^t I oft wered 49/2 = wore.

(ii) Forms originally in -ed, but slightly modified.

I boght 49/29; I bought 63/2; that bought 72/6.

they promyst me 48/21.

I dyd 58/35.

I sent 196/8.

(iii) Forms obtained by modifying vowel.

 the manoire cam 68/21.
 forsoke 99/11.
 forswore 99/12.
 stode 252/1, 2.

Verb : Subjunctive Forms.

As stated above (p. 311), the subjunctive at this period had a much wider range than it has now. The absence in it of any inflexional form occasionally reveals its presence. We may therefore pick out a few typical instances, arranged under the heads which seemed to assert themselves in the verb to-be.

(i) Suppositions.

 if any thyng fal in trawers 57/5.
 in case that Iohn haue Halsted 123/21.
 yf yt fortune y^t god take 231/32 ; tayke 232/1.
 if he lyve 261/14.

(ii) Potentialities.

a mortuary as law will 45/15 = may will.
 when he comme at his playne age 123/26 ; contrast 123/8.
 decesse or [= before] he come 261/20.

(iii) Intentions.

I will that my lord Cardenal of yorke haue a pare bedys 46/17.
 I will my lord Cromwell haue a pare bedys 46/23 ; cp.
 267/21.
 I wol that Richard my sone haue my saltcote 123/19.
 to this intent that they yerely kepte for me (1517) 265/21,
 in error for keep.
 I wyll y^t all my lande remayne 231/37 (1540).

(iv) Indirect speech.

as who wolde saye that they shulde nott nede to feare that 252/5.

Present Participle.

There is only one instance of the -ende form, and that not from the documents themselves :

ryngynd, 27 (1507).

There are doubtful examples of the dropping of the last letter of the ending :

on fowldyn tabylle 135/7, 20; but 'fowlden' is possibly 'folded', not 'folding'.

in not taken the oportunytye 217/11 (1537).

The most noticeable thing about the present participle is the freedom with which it is used in absolute clauses :

beryng wittenesse herof 80/34.

Verb : Forms of Past Participle.

In these documents, archaic forms have almost disappeared, even in the earlier set of deeds. The few that remain deserve record. Those which have continued into modern use may be very briefly recorded.

(i) Archaic form with ge- prefix.

my place . . . I-sett betwene 118/16.

(ii) Form -en.

Of this there are numerous examples, with, in several cases, alternative forms which drop the -n element. Nearly all participles of this form are still in regular use, if not in ordinary speech or writing, at least in conventional phrases. I put those examples which I have noted into alphabetical order, occasionally recording variant spellings. Duplicates of the -ed form are, of course, found :

beget : past part. begotten. In one and the same deed, 1455, this appears in a singular variety of spellings—begeten 74/21, 83/17; begeton 74/28, 82/31; begetyn 83/28; begoten 74/15, 89/18.

bequeath : past part. bequethen (1454) 64/17, (1465) 123/10.

do: past part. done: done 57/17; don 72/11, 120/18; doon 64/18, 120/16, 128/14; doyn 47/31.

But the clipt form is also in use:

get: past part. now got: gettyn 53/31; getyn 54/5; gotten 124/23, 258/16.

know (or, in other dialectical form, knew): past part. in standard use known, in Scots knawn: knowen 116/2, 181/4; knawen 46/4.

write: written 38/3, 41/30; writtyn 48/26; writte 69/12.

As is noticed in the case of several of the above -en past participles, that ending tends to be dropped. The following other instances may be recorded:

that she be well see to 42/4.

(iii) Form -ed.

In some few cases, verbs have past participles of this form which in modern English are of different form. The most usual cause of the difference is that the syllabic -ed was afterwards shortened to a single letter. In many instances, alternative forms are found in which the -d ending is dropped.

except: exceptyd 158/24; except 158/14 (1533); except afore except 74/32 (1455), 75/5.

garnish: garnyshyd 135/11.

keep: kepid 57/16; kept 83/15; kepte 182/10; but kepe 169/30 (1534).

sell: selld 40 note; solde 40/30, 57/11; soald 232/4.

spend: spendid 42/9 = spent; vnspended 182/27.

Of the instances in which this -ed ending has been dropped, the following may also be cited:

abrogate 218/21 (1537).

I wil it be amend 46/5, amended.

I wyll that ther be an obit kepe 169/30, kept.

wher they think it ned 46/16 needed.

(iv) Past Participle by modification of vowel.

find: fownde 121/39; but there is a longer form with both change of vowel and added ending, ffounden 206/10 (1536).

(v) Past Participle without obvious change, inflexional element having long disappeared.

When two or more participles are used together, e. g. in the tedious iteration of legal formulae, there is a manifest tendency to clip the ending of one or other of them :

hath deuysed graunted and to fferme lett 197/25 = letten.

Syntax.

In what has gone before, some points of syntax as they present themselves in these documents have been touched on in their more immediate connexions.

Thus: with pronouns, 290-4, 296-8, 300; with adjectives, 309; with to-be 311; with verbal inflexions, 311, 318, 319.

Some anomalous forms are specially referred to in the notes to the places where they occur :

50/16 and note 6, 68/13 and note 5, 189/25, 190/2, 217/4.

Here may be brought together some other points of like sort.

49/15 must be eked out: I will [that] he, in the same [way], have.

182/26, 27: here there is a distinct anacolouthon of a Thucydidean type. The sentence ought to have run 'All suche money that may be', or 'all suche money as may happen to be', but it stands without grammatical support 'all such money . . . to be vnspended'.

Latin order.

Although these documents are largely of a legal character, and therefore based on Law-Latin precedents, they are remarkably free from Latin influence in their sequence of words. The writers have a firm grip of English, not only word by word, but in respect of the sequence in which words must follow each other in an uninflected language.

Some few exceptions in the case of adjective and noun have been given supra, p. 308.

There are also examples of participles treated in the same way:

beyng: supra, p. 312.

the mony therof commyng 62/25 = inde proveniens.

the terme of vi. yere next after my decesse determined 74/13, 19; 78/26.

under forme in my said testament conteyned 78/29.

Slight examples of retention of Latin order (subject, object, verb) are:

To all . . . people that this present wryting . . . shall heere or see 81/1.

my childer to whom anything I haue beqwethed to 124/11.
of the wiche I wyll that xx^{li} therof she shall pay 168/17.
and that my executors no thyng retayne to there owne vse 169/24.

Double Negative.

nor travers not 49/13.

in no wise . . . nor . . . by no maner 80/28.

This usage continues on into the second period:

In case . . . Iohn digby . . . doo not paye . . . nor doo nott acquitte 144/28 (1529).

my feoffees shall nott give my sone . . . noo state in my house 183/28 (1535).

the . . . scholers . . . nor noo inhabytauntes within the saide
colledge shall paye . . . any maner of tuythes . . . to noo maner of persons 227/29 (1539).

requyringe nor demaundinge nothinge 229/4.

An example of approach to modern practice is found in 1536.
 itt shall not be lafull unto . . . william and george, nor to ether of them . . . to ffell . . . eny tre 199/32.

Another example is found in 1538, but here, in strict construction, either neither should be not, or else or should be nor.

Chardginge you neither to doo or attempte . . . anything contrarye to our . . . commaundemente 220/11.

Syntax of the infinitive.

In pure English the infinitive by itself expressed purpose or intention. In English, as influenced by Norman-French pour, the preposition for was frequently set before the infinitive when purpose or intention was implied. The two forms are often found in the same deed.

Bare infinitive.

 peces to be departed 38/20.
 he to leve it 49/5.
 all thay to pray for me 49/27.
 I will he hafe a nobyll to pray for me 52/7.
 I will that . . . corne be solde . . . to pay my dettes 58/2.
 my body to be buried 64/8.
 to gretham, to be delte amonge poore people 231/8 (1540).

Infinitive preceded by for.

that is for to say 38/7.
 j. chafir for to heete watir inne 40/26.
 remanent3 for to be departed 41/1; cp. 42/19.
 freris . . . for to say 43/8; he for to saye 223/13.
 my body for to be buried 57/25.
 x. quartiers for to be devided 58/2.
 be myne executours for to dispose 58/34.
 to be delyuered . . . for to perfourme 62/4.
 executours . . . for to execute 62/17.
 I giff . . . to Iohn . . . for to dispose 64/20.
 nor doo for to be letted 80/28.
 the abbot for to haue 122/2.

he for to haue it 124/6: cp. 124/30; 223/8.

to haue . . . for to call 169/23.

for to dispose them 223/24.

now beinge alyve or for to come 229/34.

Infinitive dependent on infinitive.

to see . . . my . . . wyll . . . to be performyd 164/17.

Defective Syntax.

There are two main types of irregular syntax, which require separate notice.

Irregular syntax after conjunction that.

Here, after that, the verb ought to be finite (indicative or subjunctive). This correct form is found:

I will that all my . . . tenementes maye be equally deuyded 137/36.

Or, otherwise, that ought not to have been used, and the infinitive ought to have attached itself to the verb in the principal clause.

By a singular halting between these two syntax-possibilities an odd anomalous construction is frequently arrived at:

I wol . . . ouer that, that euery prest of them to say a masse 120/24; cp. 121/13.

I wol . . . that then his parte to be taken fro him 124/13.

I wol . . . that then the saide plate by them to be sold 124/21.

I wol . . . that then my plate to be deuyded 124/24.

then I will that all the . . . tenementes to be equally deuyded 137/33.

I wille that echone of them to be the others heyre 138/18.

I will that the saide goodes . . . to be bestowed 138/22.

There are some singular combinations of both constructions:

I will . . . that ther be a chauntry founded . . . and he to graunte the . . . patronage 261/23, 24, 28; cp. 265/21, 24.

The second set of irregular constructions is found in the case of the impersonal verbs it fortunes, it happens.

Here, the correct construction would have been to carry on the impersonal verb by a clause introduced by that (expressed or understood). Such a correct construction seems to be found:

iff itt fortune the sayd rent . . . be behynd unpayd 211/29.

Otherwise, a correct construction might have been had by avoiding the impersonal use of the verb:

if . . . Richard . . . fortune to dye 201/31.

Frequently, however, an irregular combination of the impersonal verb and that with the infinitive is used (cp. p. 329), or of the impersonal verb and the infinitive:

if itt happen the . . . rent . . . to be behynde 172/2, 208/26, 235/5, 240/27.

if itt fortune . . . the . . . rent . . . to be behynd 172/16, 211/21, 229/12, 240/35.

if it fortune the said William to dye 187/34: cp. 200/5;
to decease 200/26:

There are other irregularities, due probably to mere carelessness.

All whiche shal be kept holy . . . as in tyme past haue been accostomed, 218/18. Here they should precede have.

Note may also be made of:

If . . . Clemens . . . hynder that this my last will may not be truely executed 168/29.

Vpon a certayne somme of mony to be graunted 256/30.

Double or multiple equivalents.

A singular feature of the English of these documents—dating back to the time when persons who attempted to write English were much more familiar with Latin than with English, and therefore shrank from adventuring an English word unaccompanied by a Latin word to back it up—is the extraordinary number of doublets, triplets, and multiples which are found in it. These passed into the shibboleth of English law, and, accordingly, abound and over-abound in these documents.

I give here a sufficient number of examples to show the almost ludicrous persistence of this trick of the language:

abiure and forswer 111/7.

Manner: Manner of.

Both constructions of manner are found throughout these documents, both in the earlier period and in the later, that with of being distinctly the more frequent.

Manner.

In the First Period :

all maner men 68/13.
 all almaner folk 118/25.

In the Second Period :

all maner chardgies 138/21.

 all maner of portions 239/24.
 almaner of coste 258/3; cp. 258/18.

Pair: Pair of.

Throughout both the earlier and the later periods of these documents, examples of both constructions occur, that with of being somewhat the more frequent.

Pair.

 j. paire blankettes 67/15.
 a pare schetes 56/35; j. paire shetys 67/32.

Pair of.

 a paire of blankettes 40/21: cp. 40/4.
 j. paire of candelstykkes 39/9.
 a payr of coberd 161/15.
 a payre of indenturs 166/27.
 a litell payre of salt salers 39/8.
 j. payre of shetis 39/19, 160/20, 163/1, 192/7.
 a peyre of vestymentes 134/1.

Term: For term.

The phrase for term of life occurs occasionally:

for terme of liff 85/21.
 for terme of the liff 82/30, 85/23; cp. 261/35.

There are, however, several instances in which for is dropped out and the phrase term of life is used as an adverb of duration of time:

terme of his liffe 68/24.
 terme of her lyff 89/37, 117/22.
 the terme of her lyff 89/15; cp. 265/5.

That.

After certain verbs, the conjunction that, which should carry on the action of the verb to the clause following, is as often implied as expressed.

Constructions with that expressed :

I wol that al my pewtir vessell be departed 40/35.

I will . . . that my dettys be qwyte 46/2.

I wol that my goodis . . . be disposed 75/9.

I woll that myn executours giff 121/26.

Constructions with that implied :

I will he haf the whitte bede 49/7.

so he . . . help yam my will be performede 49/14 = them,
so that my will.

I will he hafe a nobyll to pray for me 52/7.

I will ij. of yam syng 53/35.

Owing, apparently, to the slipping of the p symbol into easily discarded y, this conjunction appears in an aphetic guise:

I will at Willjam . . . haf 55/20.

if so be at yai will bide 57/19.

die : decease : depart.

As regards the choice of words, probably the most singular set are those which come under the above heading. The simple words die and death occur throughout both periods frequently and continuously, but there is an obvious inclination to use euphemistic words of Latin origin.

Verb.(i) die.

dye 124/1, &c., 187/34, 193/17, 200/5, 201/31, 228/12.

(ii) decease.

decesse 137/31, 35; 138/17, 20; 261/20.

discessed 145/28.

The two words are, of course, combined :

dye or decesse 156/14.

(iii) depart.

There are some examples in which the full phrase is given :

depart the world 168/38.

departe oute of this worlde 182/24.

It is also used without qualifying words :

departe 155/12, 154/10, 161/20, 231/35.

Substantive.

(i) dede 53/30, 56/4; deth 120/18; dethe 61/24, 68/17, 69/5, 72/10, 142/21, 159/22.

(ii) deceasse 41/8, 73/11, 74/12, 76/16, 78/26, 82/17, 84/5, 85/10, 89/16, 90/1, 117/23, 121/26, 142/5, 143/3, 163/30, 200/8, 261/13, 262/1.

discease 199/38.

The words are, of course, conjoined :

the deceasse and dethe 158/15.

(iii) departing.

my departyng frome this present worlde 192/24.

at my departyng 41/34, 42/4, 43/9, 27, 30.

att ther departyng 153/35.

att the tyme of ther departing 182/27.

So also with the adjective :

departed and deade 148/24.

sherive 249/22, 251/1. This seems to be certainly the MS. reading. The probability is that in the letter it was written sherine, but the copyist at Lincoln read the n as u and wrote it as v. There is no doubt that the 'shrines' of Ste. Geneviève and St. Marcell are meant. The French corresponding word (O. F. escrin, F. écrin) does not explain the form. The form shrine was in common use at the time. If sherine is correct, it must come from a burring pronunciation of r.

skift 56/30. The conjecture that this is a misreading for shift, in the sense of to distribute, seems borne out by a passage in

Canon C. W. Foster's forthcoming Lincoln Wills, vol. i, p. 129, l. 8:

'I will that my howsold stuffe be equally shiftyd bitwyne Jenytt my wiffe and thomas Bronde my sonne.'

Sweffes 251/5 is the reading of the MS. It must, however, be used for French Suisses. Is it too wild a guess to assume that the copyist at Lincoln was familiar with the German name of the people (Switzer) and ignorant of the French name? For the javelin of the Swiss mercenaries the stock reference for English readers is Sir Walter Scott's Anne of Geierstein, chap. xxxii.:

'The Swiss brought into the dancing-room with him his eternal halberd, the size and weight and thickness of which boded little good to any one whom the owner might detect in the act of making merry at his expense.'

Additional Syntax Notes.

The inverted sentence. The Paris letter of 1535 shows a distinct fondness for the rhetorical inversion of the sentence, in which the verb comes first and is followed by the subject. There is also here, wherever the verbal form is distinctive, the peculiarity that the verb is in the singular, though the subject may be plural. Is this due to the influence of French idiom—il y avoit?

where was gathered . . . the thre other ordres 250/2.

thidre was brought reliques 250/11.

ffirste, was the cordelyars 250/18.

then folowes them the gentilmen 251/7.

after dyner was hadde oute . . . vj. condempned personnes 252/7.

with this receiver was burned thre grette sackes 252/11.

Slips in syntax due to want of revision. There are several anomalies, involving needless repetition of elements, which are probably due to unrevised writing, exactly as we find in hastily written letters at the present day.

any of my childer to whom, any thing I haue beqwethed to 124/11.

also, I will that suche chardgies . . . I will that myn executoures do content them 247/25, 27.

tharreragies . . . shalbe . . . to his successurs be fully . . .

Doubtful words and places. There are many instances in which a word or phrase is possible, though it seems more natural to assume a slip in writing :

a honest prist to sing for me and all cristend sowles a hole yere 270/20. The word Christened does occur, but is used of individuals while alive, not, so far as I have found, of the dead. The word cristen (i. e. Christian) is regularly used in this formula, 246/24, 265/17, 266/20.

Mans . . . Roan 252/8, 10, look like Le Mans and Rouen, but in the French document, as cited in Sismondi's Histoire des Français, they are given as Nantes and Rennes.

after she is maryed or take on husbond, I will that my soone . . . haue the said hows 267/4. It is conceivable that take may be a subjunctive, but in that case it ought to have been she be maryed. It seems simplest to assume a slip for takes.

Condensed idioms. There are a few places in which the documents affect more curtailed syntax than is found in modern standard use :

ouersears to see this my will be fulfilled 193/24 = to see that this my will shall be (or, as we would now say, is) fulfilled.

it hath not ben sene or hard such a commission to be made to my predecessoures 264/3 = that such a commission has been made.

INDEX I

OF PLACES

The references to places are mostly slight, and whatever interest attaches to them is of value chiefly when they are grouped by counties. I have therefore done this. I may note that the Essex references are all to illustrations from outside, none occur in the actual text of the documents.

NOTES.—'Santasse,' 46/20, remains unidentified. It cannot be 'Sandtoft' in Lincolnshire, which was only a cell for one or two monks of St. Mary's, York.

'Fulstowe, Arsyk', 62/22, read 'Fulstowe Arsyk'. Of two manors in Fulstow one was called Arsyk, taking its name probably from the family Arsik (flor. temp. Henr. III). Robert lord Willoughby owned this Arsik manor in Fulstow parish.

'Ffodrynghey', 62/23, appears (Cat. Inquis. post mortem, folio edition, iv. 253) among Lord Willoughby's possessions as 'Foderyng manor co. Lincoln.' It is probably in error for 'Fotherby'.

INDEX III

OF MATTERS

I have brought together here, rather spaced out, the chief references to the more important social or domestic matters touched upon in these deeds. The individual references, taken apart, amount to very little; but, when taken in groups, they show, almost pictorially, how many of those points which at the time of these documents were foremost in the thoughts of the nation have now passed into oblivion, and how few of our modern interests were then taken account of. This Index III has to be consulted alongside of Index IV.

- advowson = patronage, right to present a priest to serve a parish and receive the income of the rectory, 114, 129, 178.
- advowson = patronage, right of a monastery or prebendship to hold to its own uses, by impropriation, the rectorial revenues of a parish and appoint a vicar to serve the parish, 114, 129/11, 131, 186/20, 198/5.

St. Katherine of Alexandria, was martyred A.D. 307, after being tortured on a wheel, and her head was taken by angels to Mt. Sinai. The word ele, 46/34, is phonetically conceivable as wheel. At Rome (see in Dr. Furnivall's Poems—
E. E. T. S.—in The Stacyons of Rome, lines 149, 150) the stone on which St. Paul was beheaded was shown ; so that the wheel on which St. Katherine was tortured is conceivable as a relic. The conjunction, however, with St. Hoght (see St. Hugh, supra, p. 357) suggests heel, i.e. heel-bone, as a more probable transliteration and object.
At Rome (see in The Stacyons of Rome, cited above, lines 425, 567, and 576) were shown a foote of Marye Magdeleyne, seynt Iulyan . . . his chykk and tethe,
an hole arme of seynt Christofre.

 singing-bread, 23, 226/4: the wafer

for the communion of the celebrant at mass. It is so called because in the making of it certain verses of the Psalms are sung. It is a very thin white wafer, made of the very finest flour. It is a disk $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches in diameter; has at the edge a raised ring; then, after a slight space, a second raised ring; and then a 'crucifix' (a figure of Christ on the cross) $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches high, and a little over $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide at the cross-beam. Distinct from this is housel-bread, the wafer for communion of the laity. This is of exactly the same material and shape as the singing-bread, and bears the same stamp, but is in diameter only $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches, and has its crucifix reduced proportionately. It is this housel-bread which is referred to, 91/30, 95 par. 7.

INDEX IV

WORDS

Into this index have been brought less usual words and abnormal forms of words, as also a few words which seemed to ask brief explanations. In most cases the form in which they are found in New English Dictionary is added. In some cases, owing to re-setting of lines in the final revision, a word may have to be looked for in a line above, or below, that given here. The words in Index III should be consulted along with those in this Index.

The following words seem either not to be readily found in N. E. D., or not to appear there exactly in this sense. The date of each is given.

THE EARLY ENGLISH TEXT SOCIETY was started by the late DR. FURNIVALL in 1864 for the purpose of bringing the mass of Old English Literature within the reach of the ordinary student, and of wiping away the reproach under which England had long rested, of having felt little interest in the monuments of her early language and life.

On the starting of the Society, so many Texts of importance were at once taken in hand by its Editors, that it became necessary in 1867 to open, besides the Original Series with which the Society began, an Extra Series which should be mainly devoted to fresh editions of all that is most valuable in printed MSS. and Caxton's and other black-letter books, though first editions of MSS. will not be excluded when the convenience of issuing them demands their inclusion in the Extra Series.

During the fifty years of the Society's existence, it has produced, with whatever shortcomings, and at a cost of over £35,000, an amount of good solid work for which all students of our Language, and some of our Literature, must be grateful, and which has rendered possible the beginnings (at least) of proper Histories and Dictionaries of that Language and Literature, and has illustrated the thoughts, the life, the manners and customs of our forefathers and foremothers.

But the Society's experience has shown the very small number of those inheritors of the speech of Cynewulf, Chaucer, and Shakspeare, who care two guineas a year for the records of that speech. The Society has never had money enough to produce the Texts that could easily have been got ready for it; and Editors are now anxious to send to press the work they have prepared. The necessity has therefore arisen for trying to increase the number of the Society's members, and to induce its well-wishers to help it by gifts of money, either in one sum or by instalments. The Committee trust that every Member will bring before his or her friends and acquaintances the Society's claims for liberal support. Until all Early English MSS. are printed, no proper History of our Language or Social Life is possible.

☛ The Society intends to complete, as soon as its funds will allow, the Reprints of its out-of-print Texts of the year 1866, and also of no. 20. Dr. Otto Glauning has undertaken Seinte Marherete; and Hali Meidenhad is in type. As the cost of these Reprints, if they were not needed, would have been devoted to fresh Texts, the Reprints will be sent to all Members in lieu of such Texts. Though called 'Reprints,' these books are new editions, generally with valuable additions, a fact not notised by a few careless receivers of them, who have complained that they already had the volumes.

A gratifying gift is to be made to the Society. The American owner of the unique MS. of the Works of John Metham—whose Romance of Amoryus and Cleopas was sketched by Dr. Furnivall in his new edition of Political, Religious and Love Poems, No. 15 in the Society's Original Series—has promised to give the Society an edition of his MS. prepared by Dr. Hardin Craig, and it will be issued as No. 132 of the Original Series. The giver hopes that his example may be followed by other folk, as the support hitherto given to the Society is so far below that which it deserves.

The Original Series Texts for 1912 were, No. 144, The English Register of Osney Abbey, by Oxford, Part II, containing Forewords, Grammar, Notes and Indexes, edited by the Rev. Dr. Andrew Clark, and No. 145, The Northern Passion, Part I, containing the four parallel texts of the poem, with variants from other manuscripts, edited by Miss Frances A. Foster.

The Original Series Texts for 1913 were No. 146, The Coventry Leet-Book, edited from the unique MS. by Miss M. Dormer Harris, Part IV, with 2 maps and a facsimile, Introduction and Indexes, completing the volume; No. 147, The Northern Passion, edited by Miss F. A. Foster, Part II, including Introduction, the French Text, Variants, Fragments, &c.; and a reprint of No. 26, originally edited by the Rev. G. G. Perry, Religious Pieces in Prose and Verse from the Thornton MS., and now issued with fresh material, and a new Glossary by Mr. O. T. Williams, M.A.

The Extra Series Texts for 1912 were, No. CX, Caxton's Mirrour of the World, edited with reproductions of all the woodcuts, by Dr. O. H. Prior, and No. CXI, Caxton's History of Jason, Part I, the text, edited by Mr. John Munro.

The Extra Series Texts for 1913 were No. CXII, Lovelich's Romance of Merlin, edited from the unique MS. by Dr. E. A. Kock, Part II, bringing the text down to l. 15,556, and No. CXIII, Poems by Sir John Salusbury, Robert Chester, and others, from Christ Church, MS. 184, and the unique copy of Robert Parry's poems in the Britwell Library, edited by Dr. Carleton Brown.

The sympathy, the ready help, which the Society's work has called forth from the Continent and the United States, have been among the pleasantest experiences of the Society's life, a real aid and cheer amid all troubles and discouragements. All our Members are grateful for it, and recognise that the bond their work has woven between them and the lovers of language and antiquity across the seas is one of the most welcome results of the Society's efforts.
